

Michigan State Fair Is August 27 to Sept. 11

To Be Bigger and Better Than Ever—This Year. Many Famous Attractions are Listed as Well as Livestock and Agriculture Exhibits

The 1938 Michigan State Fair is not only going to be bigger and better than the state has ever enjoyed, but, it is the ambition of Frank N. Mabey, General Manager, to make it the Nation's Greatest State Fair. It is the slogan that has been adopted and every member of the executive staff is bending all efforts to see that this goal is achieved. There will be more stars of the stage, screen and radio; more free attractions; more brass bands, more outstanding features of an educational nature; and more facilities for general comfort of the visitors than ever before at any Michigan State Fair.

A visitor gate of 800,000 to 1,000,000 persons is expected this year.

Five of radio's greatest bands are to be heard at the Fair. They are: Rudy Valle and his Connecticut Yankees with Caryl Gould, Chic Cannedy, Edna Strong, and The Gentlemen Songsters; Benny Goodman, The King of Swing, and his orchestra with Martha Tilton, Lionel Hampton, Jess Stacy, Teddy Wilson, Harry James, and Dave Tough; Buddy Rogers and his Hollywoodites with Jack (Screw) Douglas and Bob Hannon; Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians including Carmen, Victor and Lebert, Lombardo and the Lombardo trio; and Kay Kyser and his College of Musical Knowledge, with Virginia Simms, Harry Babbitt, Ish Kabibble and Sully Mason.

Never before in the history of Detroit have so many nationally known and famous dance orchestras been brought to the city in such rapid succession. In addition to appearing on the Coliseum stage and playing for a dance session each night, the majority of these bands will also broadcast from coast-to-coast over the Columbia Broadcasting System. Benny Goodman's Camel Caravan, will be a special feature of the Coliseum on Tuesday evening, August 23. Goodman will also do two additional broadcasts during the nightly dance sessions, as will Guy Lombardo, Kay Kyser and Buldy Rogers.

In the Coliseum shows will also appear that pair of noted comedians, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, as well as Morton Downey, Frances Langford and Bobby Breen, Bergen and McCarthy will probably appear with Valle; Morton Downey is scheduled to sing with Benny Goodman's orchestra; Frances Langford will be here for four days with the Lombardo aggregation; and Bobby Breen will be on the program with Rudy Rogers. One other noted Hollywood star yet to be announced will complete the headliner list.

GIB MADDEN LOSES BATTLE

The village of Chelsea filed a petition to annex some of their suburbs, with a population of about 100 people. The Washtenaw county board of supervisors met Monday to act on it. However, this matter was forced in to the background by a bitter debate between Supervisor Gib Madden of Dexter township and Prosecutor Rapp on the matter of placing the proposition to build a new CWA court house for $220,000 on the November ballot. The county would have to raise $24,000 a year for five years to retire the bonds. Madden charged the courthouse proposal was sponsored by elective officers and that if sufficient office room could be rented for $3000 a year during the period of construction it would be better to do that permanently. He also called the vote by the board to submit the proposition illegal as it did not carry by a two-thirds majority. On this he quoted former prosecutor Stuhberg. Gib put up so good a one man fight that the board adjourned until late afternoon to find out where they were at. Then they voted to submit the proposition by 22 to 10, the necessary two-thirds majority. The Chelsea proposition, by the way, was also approved.

Miss Mary Howard spent last week with her aunt, Mrs. Ed Stapish of near Chelsea.

Rev. Morgan Harris of Dearborn is spending his vacation with his mother, Mrs. Alma Harris.

Mr. and Mrs. Gartner of Inkster while on their way to Pinckney Saturday night were struck by another car near Newport Beach. Both cars were wrecked. Mrs. Gartner is a daughter of Daniels, the brick manufacturer, who owns the James Doyle farm.

School Aid Cut To Be Fought

School Boards, Teachers, and Other Civic Organizations are Asked to Fight Contemplated Cut in School Aid

The proposed cut by the state in public school aid, amounting to 30 per cent does not seem to arouse much interest here. A meeting was recently held in Lansing to devise means of preventing it. The press, however, gave it but scant publicity. In the northern part of the state it is different. There the schools exist mostly on public aid money and it is claimed if the cut goes into effect many of the high schools in the north will have to close. We received a copy of Manistee County Pioneer Press last week in which most of the front page is given over to articles protesting against the cut and calling upon schools, teachers and people to arise and fight it. The district schools are said to be in no danger as the inheritance tax on the James Cousens estate boosted the primary fund by several million. Many schools, however, do not collect enough taxes to keep a school running and have to be helped through by emergency grants by the legislature. The schools admit the shortage of funds in the state treasury but ask that the needed funds be diverted from the state highway dept. This of course means a battle royal as the highway department has many supporters. An amendment is on the ballot this fall to prevent just this kind of fund diversion which has taken place a great many times in the past when other departments ran out of cash.

WHEAT INSURANCE AVAILABLE ANOTHER WEEK

Applications for insuring 1939 wheat crops will be accepted from Livingston County farmers up to and including Wednesday, August 31, 1938, Earl Grubb, Chairman of the Livingston County Agricultural Conservation Committee announced this week. This is the final extension of time for acceptance of wheat insurance.

Wheat insurance, which is part of the Ever-Normal Granary Program, is being made available to farmers to protect them from losses due to such causes as drought, flood, hail, wind frost, winterkill, insect infestation, and plant diseases, over which they have no control.

A summary report received this week from the State office in Lansing shows that over 4500 Michigan farmers have applied for insurance on their 1939 wheat crops. This represents a coverage on more than 42,000 acres of wheat. However, this report is very incomplete as several of the largest wheat producing counties had not reported for the period of August 1 to 15.

Applications for insurance can be made at the Livingston County Agricultural Conservation Association office or to crop insurance representatives in the various sections of the county. Crop insurance representatives in Livingston County are: Earl Grubb, supervisor, Wm. Haack, Amos Emmons, Herbert Briggs, C. B. Lott, F. E. Bowers, George Kirshman, and Robert H. Reid. Any of these men will accept insurance applications or be glad to give information relating to the Wheat Crop Insurance Program.

Pinckney and Gregory teams will play soft ball here Thursday night.

Boxing Show Last Friday

Good Attendance at Athletic Card at Pinckney Community Hall. Ed Howell Stays Limit with Aschenbrenner

The community hall was well filled last Friday night to witness the biggest boxing and wrestling show ever put on here. This was the fifth program of its kind put on here this year. Howell, Byron, Oak Grove, Fowlerville, Dexter, Stockbridge and Gregory were all well represented.

In the first boxing bout Howard Haines of Pinckney took on Dick Musson of Howell. These boys are 120 pounders and put up a fast contest. The decision was a draw.

In the second boxing event Billy Darrow of Pinckney took on Bob Kerr of Howell. Kerr got away to a fast start and took the first round, having the Pinckney boy on the floor several times. Darrow made a comeback in the third round and scored two knockdowns but Kerr took the decision.

Joe Woodley of Oak Grove and Dwight Knight of Florida, weighing 170 and 150 lbs. were next. They put on a fast exhibition and Woodley was given a technical knockout in the third round when Knight was unable to continue.

Two girls, Fern Woodley of Oak Grove and Helen McMillan of Howell boxed two two minute rounds. Although the bout did not result in much action, it seemed to please the crowd.

Bud Musson and Homer Desorrier of Howell wrestled for 20 minutes each getting one fall. This bout was full of action and each was thrown from the ring several times. Flying tackles and all sorts of holds were used and every minute was filled with action.

In the final event Julius Aschenbrenner of Pinckney met Ed Howell of Fowlerville. The former weighs 147 and the latter 160. This match went 60 minutes and neither got a fall. Howell, an amateur, this being his first match, gave Aschenbrenner his hardest match and broke every hold he got. The program took about three hours to finish.

Stockbridge brought down Frank Trapp, a Jackson Golden Glove Contest winner and wanted to put him on the program. He weighs 150 lbs. Don Fowner of Dexter was secured but he is a 170 lb. man and Trapp refused to go on with him. No one else was available. We understand Trapp will be used here in a future program. The fans would also have liked to have seen Fowner go on as he has won two bouts here in record time.

DIG MATCH AT HOWELL

Over 1000 will witness this Great Show

One of the largest amateur boxing and wrestling shows in Michigan will be held at Howell, Monday on August 29, at 8:20 in the St. Joseph Hall.

All the best fighters from near-by towns and cities have been chosen. The big attraction of the show will be the main event when Farmer or Newton of Fowlerville and Julius Aschenbrenner of Pinckney will wrestle.

Farmer Newton is well known and is a retired professional. He has been wrestling for some 17 years, and has held a number of Michigan titles. He is quite sure he will stop Aschenbrenner's great rise. He is 32 years old and weighs 168 lbs.

Aschenbrenner of Pinckney has been doing considerable wrestling and has not been thrown nor lost a match in his last 32 fights. He holds 5 amateur titles and is better known as the Livingston County Mat Villian. He is 19 years old and weighs 147 lbs.

The following will be seen boxing: Bud Musson of Howell vs. J. Lamb of Pinckney; Ray Furzee of Byron vs. Don Fowner of Dexter; Billy Darrow of Pinckney vs. Don Riley of Dexter; B. Kerr of Howell vs. Floyd Haines of Pinckney; Dave Trapp of Stockbridge vs. the yet unknown.

There will be four other bouts of mixed boxing and wrestling.

The electric radio announcing system will be used. Everybody is invited to attend this great show.

A silver collection will be taken.

JOINT MEETING IS HELD

A joint meeting was held at the school house last Wednesday night to consider forming a band by the means of CWA project. The only expense would be mileage for the instructor. The band will be school sponsored and practice in the school gym. The township and village will assist in the financial end. Mr. McCoy the instructor was unable to be present and some points were not brought out. We understand the band membership will not be limited to school pupils.

A letter was also read from the CWA in regard to the school playground project. A man from there will be here this week to look it over.

The Primary Campaign Begins To Warm Up

Fitzgerald and Toy Are Waging a Red Hot Fight, Down the Home Street. Republicans are Most Active in Primary as the Democrats Have Few Contests on Their Ticket.

The Detroit News in their political column Sunday comments on the Republican governorship race. It states that Harry Toy's personal attacks on Frank Fitzgerald and Frank McKay while they are deplored by many members of the party are gaining power and ground for Toy.

His early campaign in which he ignored Fitzgerald and attacked Murphy got him nowhere and if the election had taken place a month ago Fitzgerald would have been nominated on account of his wonderful organization. In order to win Toy has to convince the voters he is a better man than Fitzgerald and this he is trying to do by his McKay talks. James Davidson, national committeeman asked Toy to retract the charge he made against him, that he was elected national committeeman by McKay's aid and that McKay suggested he make his radio appeal for Toy to cease his attacks on Fitzgerald. Toy refused maintaining he had told the truth. McKay, when asked by a reporter about the attacks asked if he was the McKay referred to. He said, Harry Toy, Oh yes I have seen him at the Ford Motor Co. This is a dig at Toy who is or was on the Ford legal staff as for some reason or other, his Ford connection is considered a liability.

Fitzgerald in a speech last week stated there had been no sit-down strikes in his administration and never would be. Toy challenged this statement. In fact he said sit-down strikes started during Fitzgerald's term and he did absolutely nothing about it. Toy then gave the following dates on which six sit-down strikes started before Murphy became governor. They were: Gordon Baking Co., on Dec. 5th, 1936; Eastern Michigan Motor Bus on Dec. 8, in 1936; Aluminum Co., on Dec. 10; Kelsey-Hays Wheel on Dec. 10, 1936; Kawneer Mfg. Co., Niles, Dec. 11, 1936; and Fisher Body Co., of Flint on December 30, 1936. These strikes were already established when Murphy became governor.

So far Fitzgerald and Toy have not done any campaigning in this county. Fitzgerald has toured Washtenaw and Toy is in Jackson county this week. In the county there are no contests on the Democrat ticket. On the Republican ticket the principal contests are for representative where Chas. P. Adams and Thos. Cornell are candidates, for prosecutor Stanley Berriman is opposed by Joe Gates and there are three candidates for circuit court commissioner in J. B. Munsell, Fletcher Reed and Bruce H. Bell.

PRIMARY TEACHER IS HIRED

Miss Lucy Webb of Iron Mountain, Mich., who recently signed a contract to teach the primary room in the Pinckney school has resigned. Her husband signed to teach in Iron Mountain this year and they refused to release him. Wednesday the board held another meeting and hired a Mrs. Herring to teach the primary room. Her husband is studying for a degree at the U. of M. and they also come from the upper peninsula.

his radio talks he gave the impression that some day he expects to resume coaching. His care and that of Mickey Cochrane are parallel. In their heyday of success they were both hailed as wonders. When failure came they were deposed. The truth is that neither were the supermen they were cracked up to when they ran out of high class material from which to mould teams that failed.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By Ye Editor"

The widely heralded meeting of the conservative Democrats opposed to President Roosevelt and Governor Murphy took place in Detroit last week with a total attendance of about 10. There were 35 men and 8 women. Ex-Gov. Comstock was the high light of the meeting and of the 35 men present practically everyone held a political appointment under Comstock during the time he was governor. Notwithstanding the poor attendance this meeting expects to put up a full ticket making the nominations by convention. No person in the world had a stranger political career than former Governor Comstock. At leading forlorn hopes and heading the Democrat state ticket when he had no chance of election he was superb. For years he kept the party together. Then in 1932 Democrat chances began to look up and he emerged the victor over Wilbur Franken. Comstock's big moment had arrived. Some how he did not seem able to get the most out of it. He inaugurated and put into effect the sales tax extremely unpopular at the time but since admitted by both friends and enemies to be a most excellent piece of legislation. All the time he was subjected to a terrific bombardment by the state press which was then as now, Republican controlled. They referred to the sales tax as (The Penalty for Comstock Law) and then printed stories about a $20,000 home he was supposed to be building. This proved to be a falsehood. Comstock was interested in the oil business in the Mt. Pleasant section and there became acquainted with one Isaiah LeBoe, a former New York lawyer and to have had underworld connections. LeBoe helped finance his campaign. After the election the friendship continued and Comstock appointed LeBoe to make an unofficial prison survey. This was enough and the unfriendly press branded the lawyer as the McKay of the Comstock administration and the sinister power running the government. During this hubbub the Democrats charged that Comstock was unfriendly to Roosevelt and was not availing himself of the opportunity to get federal funds. They entered Judge Lacy of Detroit against him and he defeated him in the primaries. Eloquent efforts were made to heal the breach but Lacy lost the election. Comstock was inactive in the 1936 campaign. This was said to be chiefly due to the counsel of LeBoe and Ed Shields, of Lansing. LeBoe was shot and killed recently at Clare and now Comstock has crossed the Rubicon. It is to be doubted that his effort this fall will be more than a ripple.

The Dodge Bros. came to Detroit as poor boys from a small Michigan town and by their own endeavors and also the fact that they chose to make parts for Henry Ford and took their pay in stock became multi-millionaires. Both passed away while still in their prime leaving many millions to their children. The factory was soon sold and the Dodge children have since been persons of leisure. Two of them are noted mostly for their numerous marriages. One got publicity by serving a sentence for reckless driving and the youngest son, of John Dodge took his own life last week following injuries received in a mysterious dynamite explosion. Now the press is chiefly interested in how much of his nine million estate his 30 day bride, a Canadian telephone operator, he married after a short acquaintance will inherit.

Many were surprised that Harry Kipke, former Michigan coach, entered the contest for coach of the all-college team in its contest against the professional team and also at the fine showing he made finishing second to Bo McMillan the winner.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnny Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office.

"I'll have to admit," Brace said, "that you played the game! But if you're going to be so loyal, shouldn't you be specially careful in choosing your friends? Loyalty misplaced is pretty treacherous."

"Johnny always has behaved himself before. I don't care much for cocktails and wild parties; but there are certain things you do when you're on the deb list, you know. Mother wanted me to have one season of it," replied Barbara.

"Big dance at the Somerset, stag lines, all that sort of thing?" His tone was derisive.

"No, I just had a luncheon at home. Father's and mother's friends, and their families. Last March."

"Well, there's some sense to that."

She laughed faintly. "Oh, we're really a pretty sensible family," she assured him. "Perfectly respectable, honestly." There was amusement in her tones. "Of course we're in trade. Father and his father and grandfather before him. Fruit and things. Oranges from Florida and all that. I suppose you professors think business is a pity; but at least we're wholesome. That's something, isn't it?"

He chuckled. "Everything, I should say." And she exclaimed triumphantly, "There, I knew you could laugh if you tried!"

"But it seems such a waste of time for a girl to chase around to drunken parties—"

"Oh, don't be so worthy! Besides, it wasn't a drunken party. Johnny's foot slipped, that's all."

He said thoughtfully: "I know his kind; see them in class right along. But I don't know the girls they run around with. You're a—new breed to me." He looked at her directly.

"I come from a small mid-Western town," he explained. "Folks were church people. We didn't drink, or—dance much, or play cards. Of course, I know the standards I learned as a youngster are old-fashioned now. But—what have you put in place of them? What are you like? Girls your age, I mean? Yourself, and the girls you know?"

"We're a pretty decent lot," she assured him. "The people ten years older than us did run wild; but the girls I know don't drink too much, and they're level-headed and responsible. My older sister works every day in the hospital. She's going to marry a doctor and be a medical missionary. Mother does a lot of club work, things like that. We're the sort of family that doesn't get into the society columns very much. We don't telephone the editor every time we have people to dinner. But we're all right. Doing our jobs, behaving ourselves."

She hesitated, laughed a little. "I don't know why I'm telling you the story of my life—except that I sort of want you to—well, to not be so sure I'm just a crazy kid."

He said: "I don't! I did at first, naturally; but I can see you're—not as bad as I thought." He smiled. "I suppose yours is what we think of as a 'fine old Boston family.' Your father's turning at the next corner. Shall I follow him?"

"Let him go," Barbara directed. "We'll take the next turn. Yes, I suppose we are. I never thought much about it. My sister and I do the usual things. Of course my brother's in Yale instead of Harvard, but the Sentrys have been Yale for a good many generations. And mother and father—"

"By the way," the professor suggested, "why not tell your father about this scrape tonight? I expect he'd like to feel that he had your confidence."

"No, he'd just disapprove and be stern," she said. "He's always been pretty strict with himself, and with us too. He keeps telling me how girls behaved when he was young!"

"It wasn't a bad way to behave!" She laughed. "I'll bet as many girls were kissed in buggies then as in automobiles now. Turn here. Our house is two blocks ahead." And then she exclaimed: "That must be father just turning into our drive! He drove awfully slowly, didn't he? Switch off your lights. Stop in the street, and we'll wait till he has gone to bed."

They stopped in front of the house, hidden behind a high hedge, and Professor Brace stilled the engine. In the sudden silence they heard steps on gravel.

"He's coming back from the garage," she whispered; and a moment later: "There! He's opened the front door!" Light shone out, then was dark as the door closed again. "We'll wait till he's gone upstairs," she directed. "Do you mind?"

He did not mind. He asked where Johnny lived, how to get clothes to take him for his appearance in court in the morning. She gave him the number of Johnny's dormitory room. "But probably one of his room-mates will do it," she suggested. Then an upstairs light came on.

"There!" she said. "Father's undressing. He must have gone to the kitchen for something before he went upstairs." And when presently the light went out, "Now he's in bed!" She opened the car door. "You've really been awfully kind. Thanks a lot." She extended her hand.

He said: "See here, Miss Sentry. May I drop in, one of these days? I'd like to know you better."

Her eyes twinkled. "Then you don't think I'm hopeless?"

He chuckled. "Maybe I can reform you!"

"Do come. Sunday evening?"

"Thanks. Count on me. Good-night!"

Their hands clasped. He started the car and drove away; and Barbara, walking for silence's sake on the turf beside the gravel drive, went toward the house.

"You Find So Many Objectionable Things About Me Lately, Mother!"

She wondered why her father had been downtown so late tonight; wondered what time it was; looked at her watch.

It was quarter of one.

Mrs. Sentry, Barbara's mother, roused when her husband turned on the light in their bedroom and got into his bed beside hers. She did not fully wake; just asked drowsily, "Everything all right, Arthur?"

"Of course! Perfect!"

"What time is it?"

"Quarter past eleven," he said, and she heard the rustling of the paper as he began to read. She thought sleepily that he was home early. He always dined at the Club on Thursday evenings, with bridge before and after dinner; but usually he was later than that in coming home. He was still reading when she drifted back to sleep.

When Nellie knocked on the door at seven next morning, Mrs. Sentry had been some time awake, planning her day. The seamstress in the forenoon, lunch at Mrs. Furness's to hear Miss Glen speak, dinner at home this evening. Mr. Sentry did not rouse at Nellie's knock; and Mrs. Sentry saw that he lay on his side, his back toward her; and she noticed with a faint jealous resentment of his continued youthfulness that his tumbled dark hair was not yet thin even on the top of his head. They had been married almost thirty years. The children, babies so short a time ago, were young men and women now. Mary, so like Mrs. Sentry herself, absorbed in her work at the Hospital, taking it with a severe seriousness. Phil, a Junior at New Haven, closer to Mrs. Sentry than either of his sisters, apt to tease her about her pride, her high head. Barbara . . . Mrs. Sentry reflected now that Barbara, the youngest, was almost like a stranger in the family. Only between Barb and Phil, both with a gift for laughter, was there close abiding sympathy. Mrs. Sentry wondered—lying half asleep—what their other children would have been like if there had been others. But of course there could not be. She had, so far as outward appearances were concerned, forgiven Arthur that old offense readily enough. "At least," she told him icily, that day a few weeks before Barbara was born when he came to her in contrite confession, "there has been no scandal. I could not forgive a scandal. So, since no one knows—unless she—"

And the matter was never mentioned again between them. But the forgiveness, naturally was only on the surface. Yet they continued to preserve the outward forms, even to sleep in beds side by side, so that not even the servants ever knew . . . Mrs. Sentry thought this morning that her ancient tolerance had been repaid. Their lives had always been outwardly serene; were serene as they grew older now . . .

She rose, leaving Arthur abed; but while she was dressing, she heard him stirring, and called, "Thought you might want to sleep."

He said, "No," rather curtly.

"Do well last night? Have a good game?"

"Didn't hold any cards." The Thursday night bridge was in the nature of a tournament, four rubbers being played after dinner. He referred to this as he explained now: "They finished us off by half past ten. I hung around for a few minutes, and then came along home." He added: "And I forgot your package from Butler's, Ellen. They delivered it about four o'clock, but I left it on my desk at the office."

"It doesn't matter," she said.

"Today will do," she repeated. "It doesn't matter at all," and she won-tioned again between them. But the forgiveness, naturally was only on the surface. ... these new cost figures may change your mind!

How much do you think it costs to cook on an electric range? The latest figures just released may surprise you. A survey has been made of actual cooking costs in families of 3, 4 and 5 people, covering a period of one year's time. Results of the survey are as follows: Average cost for a family of three — $1.55 a month; family of four — $1.73 a month; family of five — $1.93 a month. These are AVERAGE figures, at the rate of 2 1/4 cents (net) per kwhr.

To obtain these cost figures, 5 well-known makes and 9 different models of electric ranges were included. The ranges were used by women cooking meals daily, in ordinary kitchens and under everyday working conditions. The tests prove conclusively that electric cooking on today's modern ranges is NOT expensive!

Why not enjoy the cleanliness, convenience and comfort of an electric range in your kitchen this summer? Sixty thousand families in and around Detroit have chosen this up-to-date cooking method. Ten thousand of your neighbors switched to electric cooking last year. Once you have discovered the many advantages of an electric range, you will wish you had installed one in your kitchen long ago.

See the new electric ranges on display at department stores, electrical dealers or at Detroit Edison offices.

MEATS AT FAIR

TO DEPICT VALUE

Are there victims in meat?
What is a fine horse steak deluxe?
Can one lose or gain on a diet built around meat?

Visitors to the Michigan State Fair at Detroit, August 27 to September 11, will find the answers to these and many other meaty questions at an attractive and educational meat exhibit.

The exhibit will be known as "Meat Cuts on Parade." It will be installed by the National Live Stock and Meat Board, in cooperation with the Michigan State College and the State Fair management. Considering the galaxy of new and old styles in beef, pork and lamb cuts, the exhibit has been named well, according to its sponsors.

Meat cuts for every purpose and for every purpose will dominate the exhibit, it is said. They will range from the pin bone steak de luxe to plate boiling beef; from Frenched pork loin roast to ham shank; and from English lamb chops to lamb neck slices.

Striking evidence that meat cuts have gone streamlined will be brought out in the various displays. Meat is being sold in smaller packages than even 10 to 15 years ago, but housewives order it oftener, according to the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Meat will be shown as a food that builds strong bones, red blood and healthy teeth, and which helps to prevent anemia, pellagra and other ailments.

CAMP ROBINSON TAKES

PINCKNEY AGAIN

Camp Robinson made it two straight when they won from Pinckney last Friday 8 to 1. Jordan, v.l. pitched for them is said to be one of the best pitchers in Toledo. The Pinckney boys only got two hits off him, singles by Dinkel and Paul Singer. Singer pitched for Pinckney and was a little wild with the result he was 3 and 2 on many of the batters. They usually hit the middle. Pinckney's lone run came in the 6th when Cliff Miller walked went to third on a wild throw to first, and scored on Meabon's smash to third, Meabon being out at first on a close play. This will probably about and the soft ball games gets dark pretty early now.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—When Sir Walter Runciman was here in 1937, it was reported that he was trying to persuade Washington to lend money to Germany, to soothe Hitler and make him stop frightening England. That may or may not have been his mission, but, as a master of the old credit-and-raw-materials squeeze play, he works that way, and, now, as Viscount Runciman, he is deep in the Downing Street strategy which swings these two cudgels of empire. Prime Minister Chamberlain appointed him as mediator in the Czechoslovak-Sudeten German negotiations, but the Czechs toned that down to adviser.

Viscount Runciman has been a silent ally of Viscount Halifax in the quiet, glacial-pressure advance of the four-power bloc scheme for a European coalition and the final and complete isolation of Russia.

It was reported from London, unverified so far as this writer knows, that it was he who put over a fast credit double-play with France and Italy, the moment the Daladier government came in, and he has been tagged as the man who deploys the empire's financial resources in the diplomatic chess game.

His father was a ruddy old sea dog who sang chanteys, a cabin boy who became a shipping czar and a baronet. Viscount Runciman is a pallid, tight-lipped little man, a total abstainer, a former Sunday School teacher, and a faithful chapel-goer.

As president of the British board of trade, he made concessions in empire free trade, but he is a protectionist of the Chamberlain tradition. Like many men of small stature, he has the Napoleonic psychosis, writing books about Napoleon and hoarding memorabilia.

THIS writer has heard from several assured but not necessarily authoritative sources that Tullio Serafin would succeed Edward Johnson as manager of the Metropolitan Opera. Signor Serafin has been highly esteemed here for his musicianship, but all was not well between him and the Metropolitan management when he returned to Rome in 1935, after a number of years as Italian conductor here.

"The Metropolitan has not kept pace with the artistic progress of the modern stage," he said, on his arrival in Rome. "The way opera is put on at the Metropolitan is ridiculous. The great fault with the Metropolitan is the little encouragement it is giving to its latent talent."

The Metropolitan reply hinted that Signor Serafin was really thinking about money rather than art. In the season '32-'33, he had a fair subsistence wage of $38,200 for the season. This had been worked down to $34,000 the year he left.

He did indicate that he thought that was pretty shabby pay for an ace conductor, but insisted his criticism was directed solely at artistic shortcomings.

Several years ago, the Metropolitan was intent on national self-sufficiency in music. It was going to discover and nurture native talent.

That hasn't quite come off, and there have been the usual number of importations. It will be interesting if it brings in not only a European manager, but one who is its sharpest critic.

Among music lovers of this writer's acquaintance, there seems to be great indifference about where the singers come from as long as they are good. They insist that music, above all, must be free from the sharply nationalistic trends of the day.

As a lad, Tullio Serafin laid down a shepherd's crook for a baton. Tending the sheep near Cavarese on the Venetian mainland, he used to walk several miles to town on Saturday night, at the age of ten, to conduct the village band. He attended the conservatory at Milan and was a full-fledged conductor in his early youth.

At La Scala, in Milan, he was assistant conductor under Gatti-Casazza. He became one of the most widely known and popular conductors in Europe.

A staunch supporter of the Fascist regime from its outset, he has been conductor of the Royal Opera at Rome since his departure from New York. He was replaced here by Arturo Toscanini.

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WASHINGTON.—Something like a year ago, quite a furor was raised here by the revelation that the Home Owners Loan Corporation had loaned $40,000 out of its own treasury to its employees who wanted to organize a group which could hire its own doctors on an annual basis. This was public money, because the HOLC is wholly owned by the federal treasury and its function is to loan money on private homes to encourage home ownership. The Group Health association, as it was named, guaranteed medical treatment to its members for a fixed annual fee and hired doctors to do the job.

There was a roar from many quarters at the time because of the use of government money in this manner, but the loudest roar came from the doctors who are members of the District of Columbia Medical society. Few of us realized then, I think, where this controversy was going to lead. I doubt that there were very many persons expected to see the tiny spark fanned into a flame so large. Now, however, that spark has become a national flame, national issue of serious import. For what could be more serious, indeed, than a chance to live when the cold fingers of death creep closer?

The issue as it is now defined, succinctly, is whether the long and honorable history of the medical profession, and all of the scientific assets that this implies, shall be thrown to the winds; whether, in the place of that history and gain and the services of those individual doctors, there shall be created a new basic method, a procedure where the doctors are hired by a corporation subsisting on the annual fees paid by its members who will telephone the corporation offices and say: send me one of your best doctors. In short, as I see it, the issue is whether there is to be personalized, conscientious service or service as lacking in personal interest as a "fill my tank, please," at the gasoline service station.

That is the preface to the recent legal proceedings by our own government against the American Medical association and the District of Columbia Medical society, which are threatened with prosecution as a "trust." The government's action, of course, makes the controversy a national issue, one which interests all of us. The trust busting assistant attorney general, Thurman Arnold, former Yale professor, vows he will break up the "trust" which is the national organization of doctors, but there are those of us who cannot help linking the corporation method of medical practice with Professor Arnold's blast and threats against the doctors who believe in individual practice.

The whole department of justice position strikes me as rather fuzzy, rather asinine and, in some respects, reprehensible. However, if there is to be a complete analysis made and a complete understanding of the situation obtained, it is necessary to know that "President Roosevelt wants it done," and Mr. Arnold is proceeding. It does not seem to matter that there are only a few medical crooks, only a few unethical and unscrupulous medical practitioners; the whole profession must be attacked and defamed. Nor does it seem of great concern to the prosecuting officials that some of those doctors who are promoting corporation medicine throughout the United States have been denied admission to the American Medical association for reasons of character and ethics deemed sufficient to warrant non-recognition.

And while I am about it, I want to pay tribute to that greatest of all American characters, the country doctor. I have personal reasons for offering my humble praise to one of their number, but throughout America there can be found no greater asset. He is a friend and confidant and adviser, minister to the body and the mind. There are some among his numbers that will not have, even do not warrant, respect. But that obtains in every walk of life and my belief is that there are fewer country doctors lacking in honesty and good conscience than in any regular profession or avocation of life.

The country doctor is different from his brother practitioner of the city. The latter probably is better trained, more up to date on all developments of science, perhaps more expert in most fields, but I think I can say without equivocation or doubt because of personal experience that the country doctor is not excelled anywhere among humans for good, common horse sense. And the man or woman who is equipped with horse sense keeps the human race on an even keel.

But to get back to the government proceedings: here we see an action, or threat, against a whole profession that has done as much or more for mankind as the ministers of the gospel. I take it for granted that there are skeletons in the closets of many doctors. There is, and can be, no justification, for example, of some of the high fees charged in cases where people without worldly goods are concerned. Their lives are as valuable as the lives of the richest multimillionaires. There can be no defense, as a further proposition, for laxness and disinterest which are matters of record. But I maintain and shall always believe that there are comparatively few members of the medical profession who fail to give the best that is in them. And when I mention disinterest, I cannot help wondering whether doctors hired by group health associations are going to be much concerned about hurrying to the bedside of an association member after a few years of such practice. The monthly check is going to come in whether the corporation doctor is sympathetic and skillful or apathetic.

But let us get on to another phase; two of them, in fact.

According to the best legal opinion that is available outside of the department of justice, it seems likely that no court will hold the medical society to be a "trust." The organization of doctors is effected for the purpose of maintaining high standards, to keep racketeers out of the profession. Its members must be of good character; they must adhere to rules that are designed for the protection of the layman who obviously is at the mercy of the man trained in the science of medicine and surgery. The whole purpose seems to be the very simple proposition of self-discipline. (I might say just here that New Dealers all along have called for self-discipline among business and professional men.) The medical men want to destroy the type that feeds upon the hopeless individual's desire to regain health, to live; they want to rid society of the abortionist, the quacks and the men and women who traffic in blood. And the question I propound, therefore, is: can such a profession be catalogued in law or in morals as dealers in commodities like steel or oil or calico? If it can be so held under our laws, then there surely is no point in young men and women slaving through six or seven or eight years of training for the profession. They had better go out and start practicing medicine as the unskilled laborer digs ditches.

In this connection, too, it seems proper to mention an implication of a decision holding the medical societies to be trusts. As set down above, membership is based on character and training. If the medical society is a trust, what are all of your fraternal organizations, your civic societies, your clubs, who elect or fail to elect members because of good character or lack of it? The Masonic order, the Odd Fellows, Woodmen of the World? And what of Knights of Columbus? That great organization for good also could be broken down if a crook, for selfish reasons, would want membership.

And now to the politics of the situation. It appears to me to be a great tactical blunder on the part of the so-called board of strategy which has President Roosevelt's ear. Those men, most of them untrained in political campaigning, have failed to recognize the human element that is involved. They have listened to the generalities of those who have their own nests to feather and have so far forgotten common sense in politics as to propose a move that can be offset by direct, personal contact.

Let us think of the picture here presented in a hypothetical case. Suppose you are a great supporter of President Roosevelt, believe him to be sincere in his announced interest in the masses, praise his courage and his forward-looking program for government. Along comes old man sickness and lays you down flat on your back. Your doctor comes. You know him, have confidence in him, or you would not call him.

Then, after the manner that usually happens, the doctor talks about a number of things with you. Of course, you know something about the government attacks on the doctors and you want to hear the story from the other angle. I would, and so would you. What is all of this about, Doctor? Is there such a thing as a medical trust?

Well, unless I miss my guess, unless my understanding of human relations is as wet as swamp log—you are going to feel that the whole proceeding is quite unfair and possibly you will condemn the man who "wants it done." That thing will go on in thousands upon thousands of households and hospitals, because the smart alecks who started Mr. Roosevelt in that direction put him on the spot.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Explains the Causes of Food Allergy

Well-Known Food Authority Names the Foods That Cause Trouble

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

A NEW phrase has crept into daily usage in recent years, and draw laughs from their audiences when they mimic, "I'm allergic!" But the words have deep significance for perhaps 30 to 60 per cent of the population who have cause to agree with the old saying that "one man's meat is another man's poison."

They are victims of the curious phenomenon known as food allergy and have an abnormal reaction to the proteins in certain foods and other substances. As a result, foods which are beneficial in themselves and which usually have an important place in a normal balanced diet, cause a variety of unpleasant effects.

These may range from hives or a skin rash to a gastric disturbance with spells of nausea.

The individual may suffer from migraine headache or an attack of hay fever or asthma; or he may have a tendency to what appears to be bronchial or head colds.

It has been determined that these symptoms in an individual who is allergic are due to intolerance of certain proteins. Even when the offending foods are fruits and vegetables, it is the protein that is responsible. It has been suggested that the sensitization results because at some previous time, an unsplit or undigested protein in some way passed through the membranes lining the digestive tract and entered the blood stream. This acted very much like a foreign substance and sensitized body cells in some way so that whenever the same food is eaten, the disturbing symptoms occur as a sort of defense mechanism.

Heredity a Factor
A tendency to allergy seems to be inherited. But the substances which caused a disturbance differ with each individual, and the type of reaction also differs. For example, a mother may be allergic to milk; her child inheriting the tendency may be allergic to fish. Drinking milk may give the mother an attack of asthma; eating fish may cause the child to break out with hives.

Trouble-Making Foods
It is difficult to generalize regarding the foods that cause trouble, because they vary so widely among individuals who are sensitized, and often one person is sensitized to a number of foods. It has been found that the foods most frequently causing allergic symptoms include wheat, milk, eggs, chocolate, pork, fish and shellfish, tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbage, strawberries and oranges. Skin rashes are believed to be caused most frequently by hypersensitiveness to milk, cereal or pork. Hives are reported to occur often from eating strawberries, chocolate, fish and tomatoes. Wheat is frequently an offender in migraine headaches. Asthma seems to be common in persons who are sensitive to milk, eggs and butter.

Other Offending Substances
Foods are not always responsible for allergy, and the symptoms may be produced by contact with wool, feathers, dust, pollen, dander from horses or other animals; or even the sting of a bee.

Discovering the Offenders
The ideal procedure for the allergic victim is to find out the offending foods or substances and avoid them. For early recognition of a tendency to allergy may prevent discomfort and trouble.

There are two ways to discover the trouble makers. One is to learn by experience, either by keeping a record of the foods eaten and noting the appearance of symptoms, or by eliminating from the diet, first one and then another of the foods that are suspected of causing difficulty. The other is to let your doctor conduct simple skin tests. Small scratches are made on the arms and legs, and each scratch touched with a solution made of the protein of a food or substance known to cause trouble. If a person is allergic to that substance, the skin around the scratch swells and becomes inflamed. The inflammation disappears after a few hours and causes no pain or inconvenience.

Other Foods Must Be Used
Once the offending food or foods are determined, they should be eliminated either for all time or until the individual becomes desensitized. If the trouble maker is an uncommon food, such as lobster or clams, the allergy presents no great problem, but when children react to necessary foods such as milk, eggs and wheat, the homemaker faces a difficult task. When milk is the offending food, it must be avoided, not only as a beverage, but in bread, cakes and puddings. Sometimes dried or evaporated milk, goat's milk or soy bean milk may be used instead. When wheat is the trouble maker, the alternatives include cornstarch, rice flour, potato or rye flour; rice and corn cereals; tapioca or barley. When hen's

C. Houston Goudiss will gladly send you, FREE, a chart showing which foods have been found most frequently to cause allergic reactions, and also those which are the least likely to cause trouble. eggs are injurious, duck's eggs can sometimes be used with success, or meat or fish may be substituted.

Sometimes after a period of exclusion, an immunity is built up so that later the foods may be reintroduced gradually into the diet.

Don't Jump to Conclusions
It must be borne in mind that many of the symptoms produced by food sensitivity may also result from other causes. For this reason, it is unwise to decide that one is allergic without due investigation. Nor must the imagination or the current widespread discussion of the subject be allowed to cause adults or children to mask their unwillingness to eat certain foods with the false notion that they are unduly sensitive.

On the other hand, homemakers should be sympathetic with both children and adults who say with good cause, "I can't eat that!" And it would appear that there may even be some compensation in this unpleasant situation. For a group of scientists who have studied the subject announced a few years ago that those who belong to the allergy group appear to have a definite capacity for becoming intellectually superior. Thus, the child who suffers from a skin rash or stuffy nose today, due to food sensitivity, is apt to be full of energy when he reaches manhood and exhibit unusual ability for cultural leadership.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. M. T.—The notion that onions or lettuce contain opium or some other narcotic drug is wholly without foundation. They are two of our finest vegetables.

R. F. B.—Vitamins A, C and D are required for healthy teeth. Calcium, in adequate amounts, is also essential.

Mrs. A. F. J.—The caloric value of fresh or canned mushrooms is very slight, as their carbohydrate is in a form that cannot be readily assimilated. They are useful, however, for adding flavor and appetite appeal to many dishes.

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SO MANY readers have expressed interest in rag rugs that I know many of you will want to copy this one. I discovered it in a village on Buzzards bay where, a century ago, whaling ships put out to sea. In the book offered below there is a knitted rag rug found one time on a trip through Ohio. I have not yet done a special book on rag rugs. It does seem that there should be a way to exchange designs from different parts of the country.

The center medallion of the rug shown here is its outstanding feature. The braiding is fine and tight. The braided strips should be sewn together with strong linen thread or about size 8 cotton thread used double. The center round should be 8-inches long as shown. Sew around and around until the center oval is 14-inches long, then make the eight loops shown in the next round—three along each side of the oval and one at each end.

These loops should be 2-inches long. In working around the loops with the next rows, the trick is to "ease" the inside edge of the braided strip in just enough to keep the work perfectly flat, and to give the scalloped effect shown. As you work around, the scallops gradually straighten out and the rug becomes more oval in shape.

NOTE: Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of directions for making slipcovers and curtains; dressing tables, lampshades and many other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid. Ask for Book 1, and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

What Saving Can Do

The old saying, a penny earned is day. It is only by thrift that prosper—a penny saved, still holds good to—we cannot produce. If we do not it is possible. If we do not save, produce, we cannot save.

The past few years have seen a great deal of expenditure but little saving along government lines. Taxes have been levied which penalize savings by corporations. This is turn has curtailed production. The dollars saved by a bank's customers formerly went to further production in industry. Since 1930 they have been going to further government spending along unproductive lines, that is, lines which once completed do not make for further production or earnings.

We cannot change this condition over night, but a gradual and persistent Savings plan will automatically swing to a production which makes for employment, greater earnings, and thus greater savings. By developing a Savings routine of our own, we as individuals can create this necessary change.
