

Pretty Autumn Wedding Is Solemnized Tuesday

Gertrude Farrell of Webster is United in Marriage to Mr. Kenneth Reason of Pinckney at Dexter by Rev. Fr. Charles Walsh

The wedding of Miss Gertrude Farrell, daughter of Mrs. Mary Eagan Farrell of Webster to Kenneth Reason of Pinckney took place at St. Joseph's rectory, Dexter Tuesday morning, Rev. Fr. Charles Walsh, pastor of St. Joseph's church officiating. The couple were attended by Edward Farrell, brother of the bride as best man and Miss Shirley Weidman, niece of the bride as bridesmaid. The bride wore a maroon colored suit and carried a bouquet of roses and chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was also similarly dressed. Following the ceremony the bridal couple and immediate members of the two families went to the home of the bride in Webster where a wedding breakfast was served to twenty-two people. Among those from Pinckney present were Mr. and Mrs. Claude Reason, daughter, Leota, Mrs. Roy Reason, and daughter, Shirley, and Rev. James Carolan.

The groom is one of Pinckney's prominent young men. He is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Reason and graduated from Pinckney High School in 1926 where he won letters in football and base ball, playing center on the Pinckney team of 1925 which won the state class (D) championship. He worked in Detroit and Pontiac but for the past eight years has been associated with his father and brother in the firm of Reason & Sons of Pinckney in the grocery and meat business.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Mary Farrell and the late John Farrell of Webster. She attended Dexter High School and for a number of years has been employed by the International Radio Corporation at Ann Arbor. She is a member of St. Joseph's church of Dexter and prominent among the younger people in that section.

The newly weds left by auto for Washington D. C. and points east on an extended wedding trip. They will go by way of the Appalachian mountains and return by way of the Cumberland mountains. Their residence will be at Pinckney and the Dispatch on behalf of their many friends extends congratulations for a happy married life.

THE MESS IN EUROPE

The average person is unable to understand all the ramifications and angles of the European embroilment. For one thing, they fail to understand what right Great Britain and France have to give part of Czechoslovakia to Germany. Well, they did not do this, but it amounts to the same thing. Europe is made up of numerous small nations. Before the world war, Germany, Austria, and Russia claimed rights over a great many of them and enforced these rights by means of superior military force. At the treaty of Versailles the allies led principally by Clemenceau of France and Lloyd George of England sought to cripple Germany and Austria by taking many of these small principalities away from them. These they made up into what were called buffer states or nations. Such nations are Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Poland. Their people in many cases were of many nationalities and had no common language. Naturally there was much unrest there. The allies and the allies to protect these nations. This they failed to do. Germany annexed Austria and now demands Sudeten, the German part of Czechoslovakia. To prevent war England and France have agreed to this. That is they have agreed to do nothing to prevent Germany from seizing it. The reason is that the English and French people refuse to be killed to protect European countries in which they have no interest. The treaty of Versailles set the stage for the present unrest as its terms were impossible to carry out.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Following marriage licenses were issued at the county clerk's office last week: Sidney Watson, 23, Tyrone, Laura Audrey Bird, 19, Lapeer; Howard J. Valentine, 24, Webberville, Margaret Willard, 18, Fowlerville.

Ban on Hunting Dogs Is On

No Dogs Can Be Used in Counties Having Dog Quarantines in Effect

Dog quarantines which are in effect in several counties on account of rabies will prevent hunters from using dogs during the hunting season. These quarantines provide that the dogs must be kept securely chained or confined and must not be allowed to run-at large. Such quarantines are now in effect in Livingston, Genesee, Cass, Huron, Lenawee, Macomb, Oakland, St. Clair and Wayne counties and in parts of Clinton, Eaton and Ingham counties. In some of these counties the quarantine will be lifted before October 15, the opening day of the hunting season. In Livingston county, however, we understand the quarantine will be extended 30 days from September 30 to Nov. 1st. We shall have more to say about this next week.

ATTEND THE BRIGHTON ROTARY CLUB TUESDAY

Messrs Lee Lavey and P. W. Curlett attended the meeting of the Brighton Rotary Club Tuesday noon. They were the guests of Martin J. Lavan. About 60 were present at the Hotel Graham where the luncheon was served. Among these present were Editors Harmon and Rudnicki of the Fowlerville Review, Rowe of the Milford Times and Seger of the Brighton Argus in addition to visitors from Howell and Ann Arbor. George Gurdry, auditor general was the speaker and talked on State Expenditures. Contrary to belief he said the cost of state government is not the biggest expense bill the state has to pay. This only amounts to about $4,000,000 a year. The schools will draw $40,000,000 in state funds this year and the highway dept. $30,000,000. Relief takes about $10,000,000. The expenditures for the asylums, hospitals, TB institutions etc. also take big appropriations. Years ago there were only a few of these institutions. The tendency for some years past has been to shift the burden of handling and financing all these institutions onto the state and the tendency has become permanent since the 15 mill property amendment was adopted as under it sufficient revenue is not raised by many counties to pay their operating expenses. High state expenditures will continue he stated until the counties and townships assume some of their burdens they have shifted onto the state and that will not be possible under the 15 mill tax limit.

GEORGE T. GUNDY,

Good Roads Amendment

Many Prominent Men Enlist in the Fight to Prevent Diversion of State Highway Funds

Gar Wood, the noted sportsman, will head the general campaign in behalf of the Good Roads Amendment at the November 8 general election.

Chase S. Osborn, former governor will serve as vice-chairman of the campaign committee. Both Wood and the former governor have accepted their appointments.

The appointments were made by the Michigan Good Roads Federation sponsors of the amendment which will be the No. 3 proposal on the general election ballot. Designed to set up a constitutional bar against the use of motorists' taxes on the highways, the amendment is captioned:

Shall the constitution be amended to guarantee that gasoline and motor vehicle license plate taxes paid by motorists be used for highways, road and streets.

The Michigan Good Roads Federation has established campaign headquarters at 314 Olds Tower in Lansing, with Ronald C. Seeley as the active director of the campaign. Mr. Seeley is on leave of absence from his post as assistant to Deputy State Highway Commissioner G. Donald Kennedy.

Seeley announced a statewide (kick-off) banquet to start the active campaign in behalf of the amendment will be held early in October in Detroit. State officials together with highway and automotive leaders will be invited to attend, he said.

MASONIC — O. E. S. PICNIC

On account of threatening and chilly weather the joint picnic held by Dexter and Pinckney Masonic Lodges at Dexter was not largely attended Sunday. Dinner was served in the temple and games were played with the children following this. Pinckney won the ball game played at Huron River Park 15 to 14. On account of a shortage of players ye editor was pressed into service in center field. He got three hits but muffed a fly with bases full giving Dexter three runs.

HAS CHINESE ARRESTED

Mrs. Anna Samborski preferred assault and battery charges against Hoen S. Lee and wife, Ruth, at Ann Arbor Saturday. Mrs. Samborski rents rooms at 611 Church Street there and alleges the Lees who are Chinese attempted to leave owing rent and beat her up when she tried to stop them. The Lees pled not guilty and were released on $100 bonds each by Justice Payne. Mrs. Samborski is wearing a cast about her body on account of a fractured spine suffered in a fall at her farm home near Pinckney some time ago.

AFTER RESULTS OF ACCIDENT

Walter Pilon, who makes his home with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tomlin at Portage Lake near Swarthout's Cove was injured in an auto accident on Sept. 6 last. He was taken to McPherson Hospital, Howell, since recovering has acted strange, the injuries received having evidently affected his mind. Saturday he was taken to the psychopathic ward at the University Hospital, Ann Arbor for treatment. Pilon was a painter and decorator and worked with Mr. Tomlin.

Pinckney High School Opens Football Season Friday

Will Meet Milford High School Team Here Friday. Pinckney Has a Light Team But Expects To Make a Good Showing. The Game Will Start at 3:30 P. M.

Pinckney high school football team will open their season at Pinckney Friday when they meet Milford here. This is a husky team and in three games played previously with this team Pinckney has won but one. This year Milford has her entire team of last year back. Pinckney on the other hand has but six of last year's letter men back and the new material runs light. The problem so far is whether to put the strength in the line or backfield. This was tried out in the skirmish with Brighton last week and the last result seemed to be obtained with the heavy men in the line. Pinckney will play center, Smith and Lavey have been used at end with Lavey, Bill Baughn, James Martin, Earl Berquist, Cy Allen, and Lloyd VanHillem. The backfield is made up of Keith Ledwith, Lavey and Bob Martin in the backfield forming what is known as the pony backfield. Merlin Lavey has also alternated in the backfield and does some of the punting.

The reason for Pinckney's light team seems to be that the majority of the team has departed for other schools when Lefty Reason, a Battle Don Swarthout, Earl Weidman and Walt Graves were playing. The age limit was 19. Now it is raised to 16. Raymond Ellis who played on the team graduated at the age of 14 and a number have graduated at 15. Other schools are making the same complaint. These schools are at a disadvantage when they play a team whose average age is 18.

The team are selling tickets for the season for 40¢. This includes the four home games. The boys should be patronized liberally.

The Milford lineup Friday:
Hown, L. G.
Frushour, C.
Tresler, R. G.
Genette, R. T.
Hackloldt, R. E.
Lawrence, Q. B.
Ide, L. H.
Flynn, R. H.
Baker, F. B.

Stanley Dinkel will referee the Pinckney home games this year.

CONCERNING THE TOWNSEND PENSIONS

This Townsend plan is here to stay and don't make the mistake of belittling it. An electrical device dealer that we know recently received a call from another town in regard to an electrical device. He went there and asked why they did not patronize their home dealer. They informed him that the local dealer did not belong to the Townsend Club and never attended any meetings. They were boycotting him, as both were advocates of the Townsend plan. There is no accurate count of the Townsend plan advocates but they all adopt the boycott plan they are bound to get results.

Mr. and Mrs. Gail Middleton of Detroit were guests of her sister, Mrs. R. J. Carr and family over the week end.

David Steptoe of Dexter was in town recently repairing the heating plant in the J. P. Doyle house now occupied by Harrison Hole and family. Mr. Hole is an instructor in the Pinckney school.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By 'Ye Editor'"

The pension mania seems to be sweeping the country. In the recent primaries last week a good share of the winners rode into office by coming out 100 per cent for the Townsend Old Age Pension. Among these were listed Frank Fitzgerald. In Maine all Republican winners were Townsend Pension advocates. Of course they may have adopted this platform in order to head off the $30 a week California pension which by the way has reached Michigan. Artistic Pension advocates have been filling the state for this $30 a week pension by the Rev. O. James Crews of Detroit. Rev. Crews stated the plan will be highly organized for the plan. The national convention of the American Legion in session at Los Angeles also has a pension plan of its own. It would pay $60 a month to all war veterans over 65 years of age. However, it will not be formally adopted this year but rather pensions to widows of veterans will be stressed. These bonus pension plans are the keystone of the labor and are the means which hold their membership together. So from now on there will be plenty of pension plans.

Justice Brandeis' mistrial ruling in the Time case in New York may have caused a cascade of bricks on the Republican hopes in New York. According to the National Observer of the Detroit Free Press, was expected to draft Thomas E. Dewey for the Republican nomination for governor of New York State. With the aid of Mayor LaGuardia of New York City, he believed he would win. A third term as governor would have made him the leading presidential candidate in 1940. In a way Justice Brandeis' mistrial ruling was a blow to his prestige. His acquittal would have held him up to the public as a quackish bungler. So now we know Dewey's views on brandeis, state rights or any other of the controversial subjects. At the same time his success in the prosecution of racketeers, the conviction of James Hines, a famous chain man, was to have been a source of glory of his legal career.

It has been much ado over half year license plates of late. A great number of persons think that they should be abolished. They reason that a person who cannot take a half year license has no business driving a car. We do not follow the line of reasoning. It is small and petty and would extend privileges to the well-to-do and the moderate circumstances class by denying the same to the poor. In many cases cars are a necessity for people to go and come from work. This is especially true for many persons who live in suburban districts near cities. This is almost as foolish as the plan advocated by some Eastern Woman's organization of taking the voting right away from all persons who are on the WPA. There would be no limit to this. Next all persons getting and don't make the mistake of belittling it. An electrical device dealer that we know recently received a call from another town in regard to an electrical device. He went there and asked why they did not patronize their home dealer. They informed him that the local dealer did not belong to the Townsend Club and never attended any meetings. They were boycotting him, as both were advocates of the Townsend plan. There is no accurate count of the Townsend plan advocates but they all adopt the boycott plan they are bound to get results.

Many people are surprised by the outcome of Fitzgerald's victory over Harry Toy. It is not surprising when one considers the many factors involved in it. Toy made his campaign from the standpoint of industry and big business and entirely overlooked the laboring classes. His speeches rang with threats to crack down on labor. Fitzgerald nicknamed him the Shoot Em Down candidate and the nickname stuck. Toy became the boogey man of labor and they went over in droves to the primaries to head off Toy. This explains Fitzgerald's unexpected strong showing in Wayne county which Toy was expected to carry. Fitzgerald also took into his camp while they failed to receive a single word of encouragement from Toy.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In 1918, the Bolsheviks were fixing to shoot Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky, but he persuaded them to let him go to America so he could get a new wooden leg. He got it, also a beautiful wife, a $5,000,000 airplane factory, and a lot of flying records, culminating in his new east-west transcontinental record of 10 hours and 3 minutes, from New York to Los Angeles.

Flying for Imperial Russia in the World War, he engaged in more than 100 dogfights with the Germans and dropped 13 of them. But one day they dropped him—into the Baltic. A forty-pound bomb, which he had failed to release, exploded as the ship struck the water, and blew it to bits.

Recovering consciousness later, he discovered that, witless as he was, he had been clinging to a pontoon. The water was red around him. Shifting his good leg over the pontoon, he made a tourniquet of his torn trouser leg. He swooned again, as a Russian destroyer picked him up. He crow-hopped the Chinese border on his wooden leg, as a stupid border guard refused to recognize his papers.

Washington received him hospitably, in April, 1918, and made him a consulting engineer for the army air service. He later experienced some rough going, but the only real crack-up in his career was encompassed in that drop into the Baltic. He was steadily on the uptake, designing planes, flying and bringing through his factory. In 1933, he designed and built an amphibian plane which made a record of 177.79 miles per hour. Trained in the Imperial Naval academy, he has contributed greatly to aviation engineering and design.

Several years ago, using an alarm clock and few electrical odds and ends, he made a waltzing plane, swaying rhythmically with band music from below. His waltzing days were over and he found this a satisfactory substitute.

SIMON LAKE, the inventor of the submarine, 72 years old, hopes some day to get an under-sea peek at the sunken continent of Atlantis.

In a mid-town hotel in New York, he is up to his knees in blueprints of submarine adaptations and gadgets which he hopes will be found useful by the deep sea boulevardier. His father is 91; his grandfather lived to the age of 96 and his sister to 102. Although his once red hair is white, he thinks he is just now getting his start in life.

His 25 basic patents alone made the submarine possible. Like many, possibly most, inventors, he could devise a scheme for almost anything except getting what was coming to him. So, in his genial, casual way, he is broke.

Reading Jules Verne, when he was 10 years old, led him to capsize a rowboat on the Toms river in New Jersey and test his staying powers in the submerged air chamber. In 1894, he made a wooden submarine 14 feet long, with a soda water tank supplying compressed air. It worked nicely. In 1894, he made the Argonaut, Jr., in which he cruised under the water for thousands of miles on Chesapeake bay.

Like the Wright brothers, he aroused little attention. He finally got Washington interested when he telephoned to the capitol from the bottom of the sea. His working submarine came through. Washington didn't seem to care much what he did, so he took his invention to foreign capitals. Czarist Russia made him some impressive offers but he decided they were a disolute lot and, as a self-respecting American business man, he wouldn't have anything to do with them.

All in all, he became fed up with bureaucrats and red tape and governments in general and turned to deep sea treasure hunts. The submarines, of course, destroyed much more treasure than they ever dredged up. This troubles him. Vigorous and energetic, with a wrinkled, knobby weather-beaten face, genial and friendly, he plugs along alone in his hotel to redeem the submarine by making it a general cargo and passenger carrier.

Government Must Be Kept Liberal, Cry of President and Spokesmen

Roosevelt's Definition of Term Means He Has Cast Die For Realignment of Political Parties; Time May Prove Fallacy of Today's Liberal Doctrines.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—There is a great to-do being made these days about "liberalism." We are told in the press, through the radio, in personal conversations that "liberalism," liberal thinking, is vitally necessary; it is urgent that our government be kept liberal, and that our daily lives be moulded along liberal lines. President Roosevelt says so, and sought in a recent speech to define liberalism; his spokesmen repeat and emphasize what he has said; the vast army of ballyhoo artists on the government payroll is saying it after the manner of a stooge for a ventriloquist. A lot of Republicans, trying to ape the New Dealers, are saying it, too, and making just as much of a mess of the proposition as the less slick-tongued among the New Dealers.

Well, any way, at any cost, there must be liberalism. If we don't be liberal, we are warned, the devil will get us. The nation, its 130,000,000 inhabitants and all of their works will sink to the depth of perdition. It's a very sorry situation, indeed.

Recognizing the need, the urgent necessity for liberalism, Mr. Roosevelt undertook recently to define it. I quote his words from a recent speech in Maryland where he had gone to try to bring about the defeat of Sen. Millard Tydings in a race for the Democratic senatorial nomination:

"For example, Mr. A is a composite conservative. He admitted that in 1833, interest rates charged by private bankers to ordinary citizens who wanted to finance a farm were altogether too high; he admitted that there were sharp practices, excesses and abuses in issuing securities and buying and selling stocks and bonds; he admitted that the hours of work in his factory were too long; he admitted that old people, who became destitute through no fault of their own, were a problem; he admitted that national and international economics and speculation made farming and fishing extremely hazardous occupations; and he even admitted that the buying power of farmers and fishermen had not kept pace with the buying power of other kinds of workers.

"But conservative Mr. A not only declined to take any lead in solving these problems in co-operation with the government. He even found fault with and opposed, openly or secretly, almost every suggestion that was put forward by those who belonged to the liberal school of thought.

"Mr. B, I said, was a composite liberal. He not only admitted the needs and the problems like Mr. A, but he put his shoulder under the load; he gave active study and active support to working out methods, in co-operation with the government, for solving the problems and the filling of the needs. Mr. B did not claim that the remedies were perfect, but he knew that we had to start with something less than perfect in this imperfect world."

Would Force Realignment Of Politics of Country

Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncement on what constitutes a liberal followed very closely a statement he had issued in a meeting with the newspaper correspondents at the White House, saying that he had no objection to election of "liberal Republicans." Said he: "If there is a good liberal running on the Republican ticket, I would not have the slightest objection to his election. The good of the country rises above party."

The importance of these two declarations?

Mr. Roosevelt has cast the die for a new alignment of political parties. He has swept aside all previous bonds that held men and women within the Democratic party or the Republican party or the lesser political groups and has said, in effect, "Come with me into a new fusion of forces and action." Of course, no one who has studied Mr. Roosevelt's course since his political ears were first pinned back in defeat of his malodorous plan to add six justices of his own choosing to the United States Supreme court could have failed to recognize this eventuality. He was planning to force realignment in politics in this country for some months; but now the thing is out in the open, and the Democrats and Republicans, alike, know what confronts them if it is their desire to maintain the present political party setup.

What will happen is quite another question. Undoubtedly, the Democratic party will be the greater sufferer. It has to be so, because Mr. Roosevelt became titular head of the Democratic party by virtue of election to the presidency in 1932 and again in 1936 as the candidate of that party. So many of the former Democrats have become wedded to the New Deal either by conviction or as a result of having won office on New Deal coat tails that there is no turning back for them.

Thus, there is a split, with those who subscribe to the New Deal theory of liberalism on the one hand and the Democrats who adhere to the hundred-year-old principles of the Democratic party on the other. There will be some Republicans drawn into the new alignment, but they will be fewer than the wing formed from Democrats. The Republicans who will go over to any new alignment will be of the type of Harold Ickes, now secretary of the interior, Senator Norris of Nebraska (who once wore a Republican label) and others of the here-today-gone-tomorrow category.

And further, as to what will happen: my observation is that these so-called liberal movements don't last very long. They crack up on the very principles which are supposed to be their foundation stones. Always, there are too many "leaders." Every "liberal" who catalogues himself as such, shouts about it and produces plans for saving the world wherever anybody will listen, conceives himself to be a leader. Someway, the ideas and ideals of these liberal leaders always differ. Each invariably takes the position that his plans must be adopted unanimously or the world will go to pot.

Idea Subject to Quick Change; Try Something Else

Then, too, their ideas are subject to such quick change that few of them are retained very long. They are cast aside for something else that has more glamor. A case in point is an incident of recent history. After New Dealer Senator Pope had been licked for the Idaho Democratic nomination for senator by the youthful Worth Clark, there was talk among the New Dealers about having Senator Pope seek reelection independently; it was proposed and discussed with Mr. Roosevelt whether Senator Pope should embrace the faith of the LaFollette progressive ticket in Idaho. It was found, however, that the LaFollette had a candidate for the senate on their ticket. To the suggestion that he withdraw and let Senator Pope be their candidate, the LaFollette spokesman said: no sir! Senator Pope isn't progressive enough for us—and Senator Pope had campaigned as a 100 per cent New Dealer.

One can walk around the halls of congress any day when the session is on and find hundred-per-centers arguing how far "reform" must be carried; what "liberalism" means. And, in downtown Washington, where the really important headmen of liberalism are to be found, they are constantly fuming and fretting at each other. Instances are on record where two rabid liberals actually have sought to get each other discredited in the eyes of the President because of their differences over what liberalism means.

The only thing about which they seem to agree is that anyone who insists on sanity in governmental thinking—anyone who takes heed of lessons of experience and traditions of the past—must, of necessity, be a tory, a bloodsucker, a tramp of the poor, an obstructionist, a "republican," or some other animal in human form who is overcome with personal greed. On that point, the liberals that we see in the government these days present a united front.

Time May Prove Fallacy Of Today's Liberal Ideas

That is the story of the self-appointed liberals. To them has been given the right—in their own minds, at least—to guide the destinies of the nation. I assume that if they regard me at all they classify me as coming from across the railroad tracks, question my mental balance. But I shall continue to study their methods, commend what is good, criticize that which is obviously unsound. More important, I shall continue to cling to the doctrine of the ages that human nature is going to be changed by some Power that is considerably above the level of human intelligence; I shall hold to a conviction that real progress comes by that method and not from the crackpots who look upon the human race as a fresh litter of guinea-pigs.

But, anyway, we have liberalism defined at last by a man who is qualified to define it, and we find that it differs from what liberalism formerly meant. It was only a few generations ago that liberalism meant restricting, not increasing, the powers of government. Neither Mr. Roosevelt's definition nor his record in office coincides with the former understanding of the word. It seems to me likely, therefore, that we will go on for quite some years with this quarrel, and that may be—and this is just a hunch—time will prove the fallacy of some of the so-called liberal doctrines of this day.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Diet After Middle Age; Shows How Right Food Can Prolong the Vigorous Years

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the best prescriptions ever offered for longevity was advanced by the wise man who said: In the twenties, prepare for the thirties; in the thirties, prepare for the forties; and after that—prepare for a long and vigorous old age!

That advice is well worth following, for it has been estimated that by taking into account all the newer knowledge of nutrition, it is possible not only to improve health, but to add a number of years to the normal life span.

A Man Is as Young as He Feels

It has been well said that "the age of man has small relation to his years," for it has been demonstrated, both clinically and in the scientist's laboratory, that old age is a physiological condition rather than an accumulation of years.

In grandmother's day, a woman of 50 was considered old. Today that age is regarded as young, and much of the important work of the world is being done by men and women who can see 50 only by looking over their shoulder.

Importance of Correct Diet

On the other hand, thousands of Americans are unknowingly impairing their efficiency and shortening their lives through the misuse of food. They are eating the wrong kind of food—and what is equally disastrous—they are over-eating! They do not seem to realize that eating too much does not strengthen the body, but exhausts it with the labors of digestion. The surplus nourishment clogs the system and may be indirectly responsible for headache, dyspepsia, biliousness and mental dullness. Unless they change their habits of eating, they will inevitably become victims of their own indiscretions. For while it is folly to neglect the health at any age, to do so in middle life is to open the way to an early death or to an old age marred by sickness.

Keep Down the Weight

The first 25 years of man's life are devoted to growth. During this period of youth, the body usually has a large fund of reserve energy which can be called upon in times of stress. During the next 25 or 30 years, the weight should remain constant. If the diet is properly regulated, and sound habits of hygiene are followed, a man or woman will come into middle age full of vigor and with mental and physical capacities undiminished.

Unfortunately, however, the laws of hygiene and nutrition are often broken during the active middle years. As a result, bodily reserves are depleted and middle age finds many men and women near the danger line, no longer able to resist infections and the degenerative diseases.

That is why it is so desirable—if you hope to be vigorous at 50 and after—that you begin to plan for it many years earlier.

Live sensibly. Avoid overwork. Regularly take a moderate amount of exercise. Get enough sleep so that you avoid that chronic "tired feeling." Above all, eat enough, but not too much, of the foods that build and maintain health: milk; eggs; fruits and vegetables; protein foods in amounts just sufficient to meet your requirements, so that there is no excess to be eliminated; enough fuel foods to give you plenty of pep and power, but not in amounts that will cause the weight increase which many people erroneously believe inevitable during the middle years.

Curb the Appetite for Rich Foods

It is most important to avoid overeating. For muscular activity decreases with the passing years. The middle aged individual often rides where a younger person might walk or observes active sports from the sidelines where he formerly played them with zeal. Unfortunately, however, the appetite seldom diminishes in proportion to the lessened fuel needs. That is why every individual who has entered upon the middle years should check his or her weight frequently, and promptly reduce the fuel foods if a significant gain is noted.

The protein requirement diminishes somewhat after the age of 60 for no new tissue is being built. It is, furthermore, advisable to take a large share of the protein in the form of milk and eggs.

Vegetables should be used freely and if there is difficulty in mastication, they may be finely chopped. Fresh fruits may be eaten as long as they do not cause fermentation; otherwise cooked fruits should be used instead. Contrary to popular opinion, sweets can frequently be eaten in considerable amounts without causing indigestion. Fats, however, should be used sparingly.

Hot Foods Beneficial

Hot foods are often more easily digested than cold, and it is helpful to begin a meal with hot broth, in order to stimulate the secretion

Wise and Otherwise

A woman used to be the one to have the last word, but now it's the traffic cop.

Hard work never killed anyone. But youth prefers something with a spice of danger in it.

Men are a bit like trees. When they cease to branch out they're liable to become fossils.

Many a plain woman has cooked her way into a man's heart, just as many a pretty one has cooked her way out again. Is the ship of marriage foundering on rock cake?

In view of the needless noise that already assails our ears, it's a good thing that rusty brains don't squeak.

of digestive fluids. A hot beverage may also be beneficial at bedtime.

It is sometimes observed that five or six small meals are more easily digested than three large ones. Each person should discover what meal schedule best suits individual requirements and then abide by it. For it is indeed true that middle age—and the years beyond—are largely what you make them!

Questions Answered

Mrs. J. A. H.—Milk, fruits and vegetables supply a large part, but not all of the minerals required by the body daily. The diet must be supplemented with whole grain bread or cereals, eggs and some meat.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

cord, makes an ideal hot dish mat. Follow the sketches for directions. Make the circles in pairs, as shown, using No. 40 cotton thread to sew them. Braid three cords together and then sew the braided strip around and around to make the center of the mat. Sew a row of the circles to the edge of this center part, then add another braided row, being careful to "ease in" the inside edge just cles and braiding until the mat is the size desired.

THIS mat is made of white cotton cable cord such as you buy at the notion counter for corded seams and trimmings. The original mat from which this design was taken was made of—no one of this generation would ever guess what! Corset strings. These were once a common commodity along with collar boning, hat pins and side combs. There was quite a fad for making luncheon sets of them braided or arranged in various designs and sewn with fine stitches on the wrong side.

The design shown here is compact and, copied in rather heavy

To join the ends of the braided rows, pull one end through the braiding to the wrong side of the mat; then trim the ends and sew them flat. AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

A Twine Holder.—A funnel makes an excellent holder for a ball of twine. Choose one large enough to hold a good-sized ball. Put the end of the string through the neck of the funnel.

For Stiff Leather Straps.—Leather luggage straps that have become hard may be softened by soaking for several hours in hot, soapy water. Allow to dry in a cool place while still soapy, and finally rub with a cloth dipped in linseed oil.

For Scuffed Furniture.—If you will take a soft flannel cloth, dip it in iodine, then rub gently over scuffed mahogany furniture, when it dries the scratches will be almost unnoticeable. Then when iodine is dry, apply a liberal coating of a good furniture oil.

Cultivate Soft Voice.—A harsh rasping voice, coming from a pretty, well-groomed girl, is sure to jolt the nerves of listeners. All sensitive ears rebel against a flat, dull voice or one that screeches and shouts, and even more against hardly audible, mumbling conversation. Try to speak clearly and distinctly, being particular about the enunciation of each syllable and word.

Preserving Scrub Brushes.—Never put scrubbing brushes away until they have been thoroughly washed, rinsed and shaken, so that most of the moisture has been removed.

To Destroy Smoke Odor.—Put a basin of water in each room and leave windows open an inch at top and bottom until the odor disappears.

Safety Measure.—To fill a steaming teakettle place a small funnel in the spout to prevent burning your hands in taking off the cover.

This issue carries a letter taken from the Williamston paper. A man here cutting his grain broke his scythe. In 1840, the nearest trading point was Dexter so a man was sent here on an Indian pony to get one. On reaching there he found no scythes in stock, all having been sold. He was told that some were seen on a load of freight going to Pinckney. He went there but found no scythes. He was sent to Hell where he was old a man named Reeves might have one. He finally got one of Reeves and departed for Williamston.

John Kearney, an itinerant farm laborer was killed about a half a mile south of Hamburg when the buggy in which he had hitch-hiked a ride with James Ryan and Lester Sweetland went down a 16 foot embankment. The dead man was employed by John Denehey and the funeral was held from the Denehey home.

Has your child a GOOD STUDY LIGHT?

SCHOOL days are here again, and children will spend an increasing number of hours indoors—studying, reading and writing under artificial illumination. Has YOUR child a good study light?

The lighting of a child's study desk should receive careful consideration, because this is a place where young eyes are being used constantly on tasks requiring close visual application. Children tend to be careless of such things as proper light... and abuse of the eyes through poor illumination often results in eye-strain and impaired vision. This is doubly regrettable when GOOD lighting is so cheap and easy to provide.

An I. E. S. reflector-type table lamp, equipped with a 100- or 150-watt bulb, makes an ideal study light. There are also many excellent Pin-It-Up lamps on the market—using the principle of the reflector-bowl under the shade—that furnish good lighting. (These lamps may be pinned on the wall directly over the child's desk.) Perhaps you have a floor or table lamp of your own, one that is perfectly good but which was purchased some years ago and lacks the advantages of a reflector-bowl under the shade. In this case you may buy for very little money a clever new unit called an "I. E. S. adaptor," which transforms the old lamp into one utilizing the principle of a modern Better Light - Better Sight lamp. A diffusing bowl under the shade eliminates glare and assures soft, pleasant illumination.

Our Home Lighting Advisors will be glad to help you with any lighting problem you may have. Call your Detroit Edison office. The Detroit Edison Company does not sell lighting fixtures or light adaptors. See them on display at department stores, lighting fixture stores or electrical dealers.

HOW YOUR VOTE

IS RECORDED

Contrary to popular opinion, the results of an election, for state senators and representatives, U. S. senators and representatives, and all officers elected by a district, are not known officially for at least 20 days after an election.

The board of county examiners must meet within three days after an election to canvass the votes in their respective counties. These results are sent to the board of state canvassers, which consists of the secretary of state, the state treasurer and the superintendent of public instruction. The board of state canvassers are required by statute to meet not later than twenty days after an election to canvass the returns from the eighty-three counties in Michigan.

In an event that the counties have not made their returns of the election, the state board of canvassers may adjourn for a later meeting, but the official canvass must be completed within forty days after the election.

The action of the state board of canvassers is the culmination of the act of the army of people who have had to do with receiving and counting, recording and transmitting of the votes which signify the will of the people at an election.

While the efforts on the part of the press and radio station operators to bring to the people early returns of elections, is unofficial, it is nevertheless appreciated by the secretary of state, who unofficially, is interested in reading the early unofficial returns as any other citizen.

APPRECIATION

Pinckney Dispatch
Pinckney, Michigan
To the Editor:

I take this means of thanking my friends for their loyal support in the recent primary election and congratulate my opponent, Joe Gates, upon his victory and to compliment him on the fine, clean manner in which he conducted his campaign.

I thank the people of this county for the consideration they have shown during the past four years and I wish to urge my friends and supporters to support Mr. Gates in the coming election and to stand back of him as they stood back of me in the past.

I take this means also of pledging publicly my whole-hearted support to Mr. Gates' coming campaign for election as Prosecuting Attorney of this county.

Sincerely yours,
Stanley Berriman

Smart Fall Styles That Are Flattering

HERE are two charming fashions with the crisp, slim-waisted, very feminine look that proves they are new and smart! And you'll notice that the sleeves are proudly puffed up, not out—they give height, not width, to the shoulders. These two simple designs, each accompanied by a detailed sew chart, make it very, very easy for you to have two leading fashions of the coming season at very little cost.

Two-Piece With Jacket Blouse. This charming fashion is extremely good this fall. It's tailored or dressy, according to the materials in which you make it up. The skirt is slim and plain. The jacket-blouse as youthful and becoming as it can be. For street, make it of wool crepe, flannel or faille. For afternoon, choose velvet or broadcloth for the skirt; satin, velvet or silver cloth for the jacket-blouse.

With Smart, Slenderizing Lines. Notice that the front panel of the skirt is cut in one with the midriff section—that's a smart detail that you see in expensive models, and it's excellent for large women. You can trust the suave, slick lines of this dress to make you look several pounds slimmer. It fits beautifully. Shoulder darts, and gathers above the waistline, ease it over the bust, without any hint of bulkiness. Make this of satin, silk crepe, velvet or sheer wool, and you'll like it better than any dress you've had for a long time.

The Patterns.

1477 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material for the jacket-blouse; 2 yards for the skirt.

1585 is designed for sizes 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material for long-sleeved dress; 4 1/2 yards for short-sleeved.

Fall and Winter Fashion Book. The new 32-page Fall and Winter Pattern Book which shows photographs of the dresses being worn is now out. (One pattern and the Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents.) You can order the book separately for 15 cents. Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her father, John Sentry, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 11:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next morning, while Barbara is talking her mother about her adventure, an urgent phone call comes from Mr. Sentry's office after his departure. Arriving home in the late afternoon, Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers luridly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. Mary, elder daughter, in love with Ned Ray, young interne at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's. Sentry's partner, with Mrs. Loran's brother, Jimmy Endie, Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mr. Sentry, and Barbara, alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk. Phil Sentry, son at Yale, is disturbed at the possible implications and suspicion of Miss Wines' absence from her rooms for three days during August.

He decided to go home for a day or two; to surprise them. He dressed, packed his bag, had breakfast, and took a train for Boston. If he had sent word ahead, old Eli would have met him; but since Phil did not do so, there was no one at the station. A taxi would have taken him quickly home, but as though he had himself been guilty of some misdemeanor, he was suddenly reluctant to face them all. To put off the hour of that encounter, he walked over to Trinity Place and waited for a suburban train that would deposit him near his home. He remembered that his grandmother, old Mrs. Sentry, always came out for Sunday dinner and stayed through the afternoon and for supper, and he was glad she would be there. She was always sensible and shrewd.

The train arrived and he got aboard, and after the short run alighted. It was dusk when, bag in hand, he set out to walk to his home, his feet lagging miserably. Then a car pulled in at the curb beside him, and someone called in a laughing tone: "Carry your bag, Mister? Taxi, Mister?"

It was Linda Dane. There had been comradeship between them, a real affection, since they were children. He tossed his bag into the rumble, climbed in beside her.

"Hullo, Lin," he said, gripping her hand. "Gosh, I'm glad to see you!"

"Me too," she agreed. "Where've you been? Where you going? What are you home for?" She hesitated. "Oh, this beastly thing in the papers, of course. Isn't it rotten! I hope they get whoever did it and just—just skin him alive. But it's a shame you all have to be dragged into it!" She touched his hand. "Never mind. It won't last long. I'll take you home. How's Joe?"

"Fine," Phil told her. "Saw him yesterday." "Wasn't it wonderful that you won't the game must have been just thrilling." She turned into his street. "Drive around a while, can you?" he asked. "I don't want to go in yet."

She looked at him quickly. "Phil? Are you in a jam?" She laughed softly. "Is it something disgraceful? Shouldn't I be seen with you?"

"Oh, no. I just want to—"

They passed his home without stopping and went on. "Where shall I drive?" she asked.

"Around the park, James!" he told her, grinning; and he asked, "Lin, how are they all taking it?" She hesitated. "Pretty hard, I'm afraid."

"How's Barb?" "I was with her when she first saw the papers. She was scared, Phil. But she's trying to—keep them cheered up now."

"Sure! She would!" "I went home with her. She hoped you would come."

"I thought I'd better." He said: "You and Barb and I will have to stick together. We always have, haven't we?"

"Always have," she agreed. "Three Musketeers."

"You always were the level-headed one. I'm glad I ran into you now. I'll be needing you, Lin."

"I'll be around. But I've got to take you home, now, Phil. I'm due for supper."

"Right! Sorry if I've made you late. I was sort of scared to go in. As if it were my fault."

"Everybody's that way. When anything happens, you always want to say, 'I didn't do it!'"

He chuckled, clasped her hand where it lay on the wheel. "You're a good kid, Lin," he said, a little surprised at himself, wondering why he said this, glad he had said it.

"You used to call me a brat!" "You used to be one," he retorted.

"But you're outgrowing it. I've had my eye on you. Oh, you play around with the crowd, and you can be the life of the party and all that; but I've noticed you keep your head, too. When the ocean waves dash high, you're the stern and rock-bound coast. You'll do to take along!"

She looked straight ahead, smiling faintly. "You need someone to take along, Phil," she said gently. "You're not a very steady craft, yourself, when high seas are running."

"I know. A good time is apt to go to my head. You've brought me down to earth more than once."

She chuckled. "Both feet on the ground?" "Funny," he reflected, "that you and I have never been—sentimental about each other. I kid around with other girls, and probably you have your moments too. But we don't get that way. I wonder why."

"I wonder," she echoed, eyes on the road.

"We're just darned good friends. But whenever I've got anything on my mind, I like to talk it over with you."

"Me too," she agreed, and swung into the drive in front of his house.

"Here we are, Phil." She stopped the car and looked at him, waiting for him to get out; and he looked at her, and hesitated, and after a moment she laughed softly and asked, "Is this what you're thinking?" And leaned toward him.

He kissed her. "Thanks, Lin."

"Don't Be an Idiot, Phil!"

he said. "That helps a lot. I dread going in."

"Poor Phil. Keep your chin up," she bade him. "And—come see me, bye!"

She drove away, and he carried his bag up the steps and—since the door was always locked—rang. Oscar and Nellie were out on Sunday evenings, so it was Barbara who came to the door.

"Phil! she cried.

She caught him and kissed him. He felt her tremble and held her and whispered:

"Hey, Barb! You're shaking."

"Oh, I'm so darned glad you've come, Phil," she murmured. "Today's been awful!"

Mrs. Sentry called from the dining room, "Is that you, Phil?" He winked at Barbara reassuringly, and went in.

His mother said, "We're just sitting down." She looked at him searchingly. Phil saw that his father was almost haggard; thought these last two days must have been a strain. "We didn't expect you," his mother added. "Is anything wrong, Phil?"

"Gosh, no," he protested. "I saw the papers, thought you might need me."

"Isn't it exciting, Phil?" Barbara cried.

Mrs. Sentry said sharply, "Barbara! Don't talk like a shop girl!"

Barbara hesitated; she said almost pleadingly: "I'm sorry, mother! I'm just trying to—be the comic relief or something. We're all so gloomy. Can't we be a little cheerful, please?"

"It's hardly a time for cheerfulness," her mother retorted.

Phil, beginning to eat, said hurriedly: "I've only seen the papers. Is there anything that isn't in them?"

Mrs. Sentry answered him. "No, Phil. At least, nothing that we know. Of course the police are doing everything they can. Inspector Irons was here this afternoon to see your father. Something about the key, wasn't it, Arthur?"

Mr. Sentry nodded. "She had a key to the back door, Phil," he explained. "They found it in her pocketbook. The Inspector wanted to know whether I gave it to her, but I couldn't help him. I suppose she stole it while she was working for us."

Mary asked suspiciously, "Phil, why did you come home?"

"Oh, I'm just celebrating," he assured her. "That was some game, yesterday! The best I ever saw. I'm still hoarse from it."

"You look as though you had celebrated all night!"

He grinned in an irritated fashion.

"Since you took up nursing you're keen on symptoms! No wonder doctors' families always have something the matter with them, with someone like you around."

There was a moment's silence; and then Mr. Sentry asked quietly, "Sure there's nothing wrong, Phil?"

"No, father. I just felt like seeing you all."

And Grandmother Sentry demanded, "Why shouldn't he come home if he wants to, Arthur?"

Mr. Sentry said, "Well, after all, college is his job right now." The doorbell rang, and Barbara went to answer it. "But of course we're glad to see you, Phil."

There were voices in the hall. They watched the door. Then Barbara came back, pale terror in her eyes. "Father, it's Inspector Irons," she said in low tones. "He—"

The Inspector, without waiting, came in past her; and a second man followed him. Mr. Sentry stood up, holding to the back of his chair. The second man stopped at his elbow. Mr. Sentry said, "Good evening, Inspector."

The Inspector said, "Mr. Sentry, I'll ask you to come along with me."

Phil stared at his father, felt his own cheeks stiffen. Mr. Sentry licked his lips. "Where to, Inspector?" he asked, in a hoarse voice. "After all, it's Sunday evening—"

The Inspector hesitated uncomfortably. "I'd rather talk about it at Headquarters," he said. "That will be easier, all around."

Then the other man touched Mr. Sentry's arm.

For a moment after the man in plain clothes touched Mr. Sentry's arm, the room was still as ice. Then Mr. Sentry nodded, almost with relief; and he said quietly to Mrs. Sentry, "I'll have to go, Ellen."

To Phil: "You can take mother in town when she's ready."

Phil nodded, and looked toward old Mrs. Sentry, and he uttered a low ejaculation. Her head had dropped forward, her chin was resting on her chest, and her eyes were closed. At his exclamation, Mary went quickly toward the older woman, and Mrs. Sentry without moving said, "Barbara, get my smelling salts!" Barbara darted up the stairs.

Inspector Irons spoke to Mr. Sentry; they moved away. Mrs. Sentry tried to follow; but she seemed to stumble, and stopped. Only Phil went with his father out into the hall; and, standing in the open doorway, he saw Mr. Sentry get into the police car, into the rear seat. Inspector Irons sat on one side of him, the man in plain clothes on the other. There were policemen in uniform in front, and Phil noticed abstractedly the radio antenna, like an old-fashioned buggy whip, projecting above the roof. He thought in a dull way that his father must be crowded in the narrow seat; since the Inspector was a big man, and so was his companion. The car drove away.

When Phil went back into the house, into the dining-room, old Mrs. Sentry was herself again. He asked, "All right, grandmother?"

"All right? Of course I'm all right," she said sharply. "I was all right all the time. I just did it to give you all something to think about. You were standing around like a lot of statues, scared silly!"

"Your color's come back," Phil commented.

"It was never gone," she insisted.

Mrs. Sentry rose, and she said in a low tone, thinking of the servants, "Come into the living-room."

They followed her quietly, not speaking, not daring to speak. The others sat down, but Phil remained standing. His cheeks were still stiff; his lips felt thick and clumsy. Yet—here were four of them, four women, his sisters, his mother, his grandmother. He was the only man; he must do something, say something.

He said, groping: "How about a rubber of bridge? You don't want to go home yet, do you, grandmother?"

Old Mrs. Sentry said sharply: "Don't be an idiot, Phil! Don't try to stick your head in the sand. All our heads. Face the fact! They think your father killed that girl!"

Barbara gasped, looking from one to another, her eyes beseeching them to deny this. Mrs. Sentry made an indignant sound; and Phil argued unconvincedly: "Oh, I don't think so! They probably just want some more information or something. Maybe they've arrested someone and want father to identify him."

"Nonsense! I'm too old to fool myself, or to be fooled!"

Barbara's eyes were streaming, yet she made no sound. Mary was red as flame. Mrs. Sentry said resentfully, "But mother, you surely don't believe—"

The older woman said curtly: "The police aren't fools! If they have arrested Arthur, be sure they had good reason!"

"I hope you won't talk like that before outsiders!"

"Outsiders!" Grandmother Sentry snorted. "Ellen, you're a plain snob!"

"I have some pride!" Mrs. Sentry said composedly.

"This will shake it out of you!" the old woman predicted, almost with a relish. "I don't know whether Arthur killed this girl or not; but it wouldn't surprise me! It's a wonder to me he hasn't got mixed up with some woman long ago. I don't know how he lives in the same house with you and your pride!"

Mrs. Sentry smiled patiently, thinking: She was always a scold, a harridan. I suppose she was pretty, and Arthur's father lost his head and married her. Then she saw Barbara staring at them both through tears, and she protested, "Really, mother!"

Grandmother Sentry said more gently: "There, Ellen, I'm sorry! We can't mend the past now, I suppose. After all—"

She stopped, for tires hissed on gravel, in the drive outside, and while they listened rigidly, someone came up the steps and rang the bell. Phil cried in a great relief, "There, he's back already!"

He went to the door, the two girls on his heels.

Noted Inventor Points Out Helicopter Value in Warfare, Should It Be Needed

The helicopter would prove invaluable as a war defense machine should the United States enter armed conflict, Ivan Eremeeff, Philadelphia inventor, believes, writes a Philadelphia correspondent in the Los Angeles Times.

Eremeeff said the vertical-ascending craft "is ideal for observation purposes, for it is not nearly so easy to see from a distance as an observation balloon."

The War department has a complete record of the development and design of the helicopter, the inventor said, and in event of war probably would immediately begin perfection of the peculiar ship.

Pointing out the benefit of the craft's vertical lifting power—it has whirling horizontal blades in place of the conventional wings—Eremeeff said it "can land anywhere, even on a house roof, or in the branches of a tree, and ascend vertically from the same spots."

Because of its ability to ascend straight up, field hospitals could use the helicopter extensively, mainly by picking up dead and wounded from battlefields, Eremeeff said.

The inventor, who supervised the construction of the first successful helicopter for the United States army eighteen years ago, believes that the big problem in helicopter design lies in control. He said as long as the craft remains level, it is under perfect control, but a steep incline will send it crashing to earth.

Eremeeff said he is planning to design a blade for the helicopter which will control the ship as well as propel it.

The Great Pyramid of Egypt

It is believed that the Great Pyramid of Egypt was built by King Cheops in 4700 B. C., and that 100,000 men were employed for ten years in making a causeway 3,000 feet long to facilitate the transportation of stone from adjacent quarries and the same number of men worked 20 years more to complete the pyramid.

International Relations

MANY eminent people in the political and economic spheres have for years been endeavoring to place before a waiting and anxious world constructive ideas for establishing friendly international relations on a secure and practical basis. But, so far, none of the material methods which have been experimented with have succeeded in breaking down the fear of aggression, or the thoughts of bitterness in the human heart. That these fundamental errors need to be overcome is certain, if the world is to experience the lasting peace and prosperity which humanity has so long desired.

That there is a sure way of solving this most important of all world problems is unquestionable, since there is no unsolvable difficulty. The Apostle John in profound yet simple language, which a child can understand, clearly shows us this way. Tenderly he pleads (I John 4:7, 8), "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love."

Some may say that love is all very well in its very intimate place between friends and relatives, but of what effectual use is it between nations? Further, it is sometimes argued that ideals, ambitions, and characteristics vary so widely in each country, that it is impossible for even the closest neighbor to understand another nation's differing needs and aims, and how to deal with them.

But are we not conclusively told that love, understood in its relation to Love, God, can overcome all barriers, and form that lasting link necessary for world peace? It is the unselfish desires and united aims of men which break down the temporary obstacles of language and material tradition. In the first century of the Christian era, Paul discerned this fact, for he wrote: "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." But "charity [love] never faileth." (I Corinthians 13:8).

Mary Daker Edly, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes on page 340 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself'; annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry;—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed."

Since the knowledge that God, divine Love, is indeed the Father of all, foreshadowed the gloriously liberating effects mentioned in this illuminating passage, it is not impracticable, but divinely potent and natural. This broader realization of true brotherhood, wherein each one seeks his own progress in the good of another, because all are brethren, will in due course solve every national and international problem relating to frontiers, colonies, and economic supplies.

When in a human family there are discontent, lack of affection, and a general disregard for the progress and welfare of each member, it is easy to see that the whole structure of that family's success and well-being is liable to totter. Selfishness and joylessness have undesirable effects on health and happiness. But if one and all have a common basis for true affection and selfless service, the family will prosper, and will steadily increase in health, freedom, and tranquility.

Thus it should be with the great universal family—the brotherhood of nations. Each one should work for the general good, realizing that all the children of God have their rightful place in the divine plan, wherein there is fullest liberty, progress, and true prosperity for all. Since God is good, good is inexhaustible and permanent, and is given in equal measure to all by the loving Father. But in order that boundless good may be fully utilized for the benefit of every nation, man must be clearly understood as not material and imperfect, embodying mortal passions and hatreds, but as wholly spiritual and perfect, the reflection of God and the embodiment of all right ideas.

When love, reflecting the divine, governs the hearts of men and is practised in daily life, every human difficulty will be dissolved. The full understanding of the ever-presence of divine Love is destined to dispel all sense of discord, whether of an individual or a collective nature, banish fear and distrust, and put an end to political intrigue and the desire for alliances and counteralliances. As humanity wakens to recognize "one Father with His universal family," held in the gospel of Love" (ibid., p. 577), good will and lasting peace will be established on earth.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Giant Among Flowers

The amorphophallus, which produces the largest flowers in the world, is so big that a man standing upright can barely reach the top with the tips of his fingers and can only reach half way around its circumference.

Red Coral Always Prized

It is red coral that is and always has been prized, not solely for jewelry and buttons, but as a charm to bring safety, health and secrets not revealed to the ordinary person. As ancient Gauls rushed headlong into battle, they trusted their safety to their swords, strength and the "magic" coral imbedded in their shields or helmets. Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." The world's red coral comes from the reefs off the Mediterranean coast of Africa, says the Washington Post, and is obtained chiefly by Italians.

CHECKS

A check has a great deal of power in America, for nearly every important business transaction from a grocery bill to a million dollar deal is paid by check. Without checks or credit it would be impossible for a country of a size such as ours to operate efficiently. The present clearing house systems throughout the country have so speeded up payment of checks that the time when credit is actually in motion is small. You pay a bill in Detroit, Chicago, Lansing or Ann Arbor, and you can get your cancelled check in two days. In some instances one day is enough.

The small charge involved in maintaining an account under the $100 balance requirement is negligible when the benefit of the cancelled check is considered. Cancelled checks take the place of receipted bills and are more easily handled than bills. For the ordinary account, a balance which is kept at $100 or more eliminates this charge.
