President Franklin Roosevelt Elected to Third Term in Big Landslide. Democrats Increase Number of Seats in Senate and House.

MURRAY VANWAGONER WINS ELECTED GOVERNOR

CONGRESSMAN BLACKNEY IS DEFEATED BY CHARLES ADAIR

President Roosevelt was reelected to a Third Term Tuesday by a landslide. He carried the big states of New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Illinois and Ohio which alone with his solid south was enough to elect him. Besides he carried all the New England states and was even pressing Willkie close in Maine, one of the two states Landon carried in 1936. Willkie was assured of but 8 states most of them being in the northwest. While Roosevelt had a top heavy electoral vote his popular vote in most cases was not as big as in 1936.

President Franklin Roosevelt

In Putnam township a record breaking vote of 604 were cast. Of these 108 were absent voters ballots. There were 189 straight Democrats and 125 straight Republicans and 3 Socialists. 120 split Democrat votes and 156 split Republican. The results were as follows:

President: Roosevelt 309, Willkie 281; Governor: Van Wagoner 328, Dickinson 260; Lt. Governor: Murphy 310, Keyes 263; Sec. of State: Card 285, Kelly 292; Att. Gen. Starr 307, Rushton 268; Treas.: Fry 318, Flynn 252; Aud. Gen.: FitzGerald 295, Vandenberg 280; Congressman: Adair 300, Blackney 268; State Senator: Leighton 305, Hittle 260; Representative: Hosley 278, Adams 289; Prosecutor: Barton 278, Gates 298; Sheriff: Kennedy 381, Miller 212; Clerk: Finlan 297, Hagman 279; Treas.: Ledwidge 366, Eastman 215; Register: Barber 284, Bush 292; Drain Com.: Dilloway 295, Munsell 285.

Of the Putnam ballots one was void and 3 absent voters ballots did not arrive in time to be counted. In Putnam the Huron-Clinton Parkway and the Civil Service got yes votes and the School Tax, Dental Advertising bill and Bus bill got No votes.

On the Non-Partisan ballot for supreme court Boyles got a majority but only half the ballots were voted. The surprise was the small majority given President Roosevelt. Four years ago he received 252 majority. This year but 28. The reason given for this is opposition to the draft by young voters and their parents although this evidently did not prevail in any other section. Sheriff Kennedy led the ticket here with 179 majority and Eleanor Ledwidge got 151. Three Republicans, Joe Gates, Charles Adams and Frank D. Bush got majorities here. The reason for this was their Democrat opponents made no campaign to speak of and no one here was acquainted with them.

In the state Murray VanWagoner was elected governor by a big majority. He held Gov. Dickinson even out state and got a huge majority in Wayne county. The other state offices seem to have been won by the Democrats except U. S. Senator where Vandenberg had a small lead.

Congressman Blackney conceded his defeat to Charles Adair Towne pension man after Adair got a huge majority in Genesee county. In the county all the Republican

New Hudson Team Is the Winner

New Hudson's Unbeaten Team Trims Pinckney 27 to 7 With Their Reserves Playing Part of the Game. Darrow Scores Lone Touchdown for Locals.

The New Hudson team which has been having a fine season and has an unbroken record of wins this year added another scalp to their list when they took Pinckney into camp Friday 27 to 7. This does not show the difference between the two teams for New Hudson used their second team during part of the contest. It was against the second stringers that Pinckney scored her lone touchdown Darrow going through tackle. Kuhn kicked goal for the extra point.

Rickard, fast backfield man was unstoppable and scored 3 touchdowns for New Hudson on end runs line plunges and what have you. In the closing minutes of the game he caught a Pinckney punt and ran it back 60 yards for a touchdown.

The game was played in a slight drizzle on a water soaked field and on account of the slippery ball passes did not prove very successful.

Next Friday Pinckney will end her season playing Stockbridge here. This team started badly but has won her last two contests, beating Dansville and Leslie. Pinckney has always been able to make a showing against this team and will try to end her season with a victory.

Mary Jane Otwell, of Pinckney, daughter of Ralph Otwell, and George William Meyer, of Pinckney, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meyer, spoke their wedding vows at 6 o'clock Wednesday night in a ceremony at the Congregational church here, Rev. J. M. McClucas officiating.

Miss Otwell, who was married on her 20th birthday, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a broad white taffeta gown with a veil, and her arm bouquet was of white chrysanthemums.

Sister is Attendant

Her sister, Miss Virginia Otwell acted as her bridesmaid, and she wore peach tulle and carried yellow and bronze mums. Edsel Meyer, a brother of the groom, acted as the best man, and the ushers were Jack Hannett, Donn Widmayer, Earl Berquist and William Baughn.

Mrs. McClucas presided at the organ and played the wedding march. A reception was arranged in the parlors of the church by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meyer, with Mrs. Daller and Mrs. Coyle as co-hostesses. Michigan Mirror State News

The Danger of Too Many Referendum Votes at Elections is Discussed

When someone a few months ago signed the names "Joe Palooka", "Gyp the Blood", "Charlie Potato" and "Joe Manure" to a legal petition seeking a referendum on an act of the 1939 legislature, he probably didn't realize the public service he was performing.

Those names were among thousands signed on petitions filed with the secretary of state. They were supposed to be qualified electors of the state of Michigan, and the petitions carried affidavits saying they were so. But the fact was that they were not only fictitious but they were scribbled into the document in the defiance of Michigan's basic law.

What was the result? Was someone called to account for this prankful misuse of a democratic privilege?

No, the only thing that happened was that the names finally were scratched off the list and the rest of the petition was accepted by the department of state as valid. There were numerous other evident deceptions on that particular batch of petitions. Some names were accompanied by non-existent ward designations and others were written one after another down a page in the handwriting of a single person.

Authority Limited

This case was carried to the state supreme court in an effort to invalidate these petitions. The court held that under the constitution the secretary of state is merely a ministerial officer and has no authority to look behind the face of the petitions.

It was held, however, that the department of state may eliminate names which are manifestly fictitious, such as "Joe Palooka"; those that have no addresses given; and those listing non-existent wards.

Thus the funny names served one important purpose. They were funny enough to attract statewide publicity and to highlight, at least to some degree, a grave weakness in the state's election machinery. The instances cited here are by no means all that could be mentioned to illustrate the disregard of the purpose of the petition signing. A careful study of almost any batch of petitions filed to qualify an issue for the ballot, indicates that this form of voting has become something of a force.

It might be argued whether signing a petition is the same as voting at the polls. However, the constitution provides the same qualifications. That is to say, only qualified electors may do either. The big difference appears to be that while there is ramified machinery set up to prevent fraud at the polls and to punish the culprit who tampers with the Constitution to Blame?

BULLIS — READ

At a very impressive candle light service, in the presence of several relatives, Mr. Robert Read, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Read of Pinckney, and Miss Genevieve Bullis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bullis of Pinckney were united in marriage Thursday evening, October 21st at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. J. M. McClucas read the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Bruce Reid, sister of the bride sang, "Oh Promise Me". The bride was given in marriage by her father. The young couple were unattended.

The bride wore a gown of powder blue chiffon and carried a bouquet of white baby mums and for traveling wore a red velvet princess style dress. The groom wore a light blue business suit. The groom graduated in Pinckney High School Class of 1936, and from Cleary Business college, Ypsilanti in 1940, and has a position in Detroit with the Pennsylvania Air Lines. The bride graduated in the Stockbridge High School in 1936 and has a position in her uncle's office, Dr. Ostrander, of Ann Arbor.

CURRENT COMMENT "By Ye Editor"

Now that everyone has found out what their draft number is and whether they are liable to immediate call we can take a breathing spell. According to the new releases only 627 will be taken from the entire state of Michigan in the first draft booked for November 18. Enlistments in the different counties will also cut this number down considerably. It is expected that not over 15 will be taken from this county in the first draft and physical disability and exemptions for dependents will cut this number down considerably.

Halloween passed off here quietly in which the usual number of windows were soaped, a number of Chic Sales architectures were tipped over and a few autos were shoved around. In dollars and cents the total amount of damage was slight. Masked children went from house to house ringing doorbells. No deputies were on duty here except at intervals. There were numerous house parties and other amusements.

The Avon township board is still refusing admittance to 19 children of members of the sect of Jehovah's Witnesses who refuse to salute the flag. Each morning these children come to school and are denied admittance. This has gone on for several weeks now. Probate Judge Arthur Moore of Oakland tried to settle the matter by suggesting that the school board disregard the flag salute and merely require the children to take an oath of allegiance to the United States. Such a procedure is recognized in courts as it relates to certain religious sects which forbid their members to take an oath on the Bible. They merely affirm. However, at last reports the school board was still insisting that they salute the flag.

Justice Lila Noufelft has declared the ordinance forbidding the distribution of handbills in the city of Dearborn without a permit is unconstitutional. This was caused by the effort of the C. I. O. to distribute bills and literature at the gates of the Ford factory in Dearborn. A similar ordinance passed by the city was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court. Dearborn drew up another one which Justice Noufelft has ruled unconstitutional. This will also be appealed to the supreme court. The reason for declaring the bill unconstitutional was given that it interferes with freedom of speech and of the press.

The next few days will show whether the country of Greece will go the way of Holland, Denmark, Norway, Belgium and France or will continue to function. The latter seems to be shaping up similar to the other embroilings. The Greeks are making a determined first stand against Italy, reinforced by British ships and supplies. However the battle has not yet started in earnest and whether they can withstand the combined blitzkrieg of airplanes and tanks when the big push starts is a problem. The other countries could rot and they ranked higher in the list of world power than Greece. The Greeks are on their own as at the present time there is no chance of obtaining help from British armies.

We wonder if the past campaign will mean the finis of Messrs. Gallup, Roper, Hurja, Dunne and other straw pollers who missed the election by a mile. Gallup and Roper predicted a close finish and the others a Wilkie landslide. This is too good a way of gathering a living to give up and now that these present day pollers have been discredited undoubtedly another flock of new pollers will show up for the next campaign. Also the Hooper Holmes poll gave Wilkie a majority in Detroit which failed to develop.

Snake Cultists Fight Legal Ban

Authorities Seek to Stop Strange Rites as Public Menace.

PINE MOUNTAIN, KY.—A little cult of mountain folk tucked away in these remote and rugged hills is rapidly spreading a strange snake-handling ritual to demonstrate divine faith.

The followers are sending out their missionaries from the hills to preach their "true gospel," and it has reached far into the South and even north of the Ohio river.

From the hills the snake-handling ritual has spread into Tennessee, Georgia, Virginia, West Virginia, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan.

Banned by Law.

The Commonwealth of Kentucky considered the situation so grave the legislature passed a law recently prohibiting snake handling at religious services, with violators subject to fines of $20 to $50 and a jail sentence. But the practice flourishes.

In Cincinnati police invaded a meeting of the snake-handlers at the "True Church of God" and seized two reptiles after Ethel Seely, a nurse, was bitten.

Down in Adel, Ga., the cult ran afoul of the law when six-year-old Letha Mae Rowan was bitten by a rattlesnake during one of their ceremonies. Officers heard of the case and sought the child for medical aid—but the mother hid Letha Mae, stoutly maintaining that divine faith would make her well again.

The stricken child's father, Albert Rowan, a tenant farmer, and Preacher W. T. Lipham were jailed until it was apparent the child would recover.

The teachings of the cult are based on a literal interpretation of the words of St. Mark, in which Christ, after his resurrection, appeared to them: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

"And these signs shall follow them that believe; in My name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Mark 16:17-18.

About a decade ago K. D. Browning, a Pine Mountain farmer and preacher, began teaching his flock that those with Divine faith could pick up snakes and not be harmed even if bitten.

His following grew during the years. On the third Saturday and Sunday of each month the mountain folk gather in the Pine Mountain church for services which oftentimes last all day and far into the night. Many trudge for 10 or 15 miles across the mountain ridges.

For hours the wooded hillsides echo with sounds of cymbals, clapping hands and sing-song chants which beat on the senses in a monotone like the steady pounding of voodoo drums in the jungles.

The emotional effect is terrific. Men and women shout and pray in an outpouring of emotion.

Any "brother" may preach who feels the urge.

A cult member who "feels the spirit" takes a writhing snake and wraps it about his head or fondles it in his hands. Then it is passed among the believers, men and women, in an atmosphere that fairly crackles with nervous tension.

British Mother in U. S. Sprints at Fire Siren

LITCHFIELD, CONN.—Neighbors looked amazed as Mrs. J. Matthews began sprinting toward her three children when the fire siren emitted its shrill blasts. Then they recalled that she was a refugee from England.

"Every time I hear a siren I think I'm back in England, and it's an air-raid alarm," she said.

Goats Used for Harvest

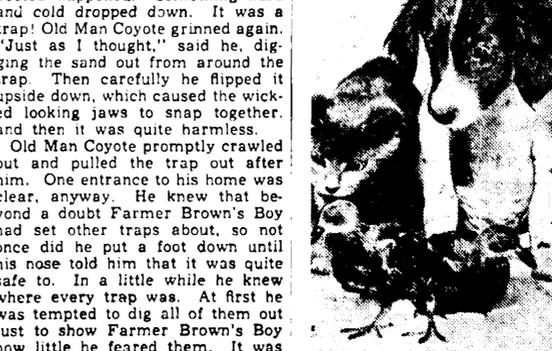

IN Southwest Mountains LAS TRAMPAS, N. M.—Giant combines and gleaming new binders harvest the wheat in most of Twentieth century America but in the remote mountains of New Mexico—where the mail comes by buggy three times a week—the Spanish-Americans still use herds of goats instead of machines for the harvest.

It's an old custom handed down when Spanish conquistadores rode through what is now the great Southwest of the United States. As far as Juan and Pedro and the other "little people" of the New Mexico mountains are concerned it's still good enough.

On hard-packed ground the herd of thrashing goats is driven around and around. The wheat is under their sharp hooves and in moments the grain has been trampled into the dust, leaving only straw.

The primitive farmers shovel up the chaff and wheat and dirt and throw it into the air to clean it.

Odd Foursome

Just one big happy family are these four pets of Mrs. R. A. Dahlstedt, Washington, even though by nature the creatures pictured are not usually so amiable toward one another. The group includes Skippy, the cat; Spotty, the dog, and two baby pigeons. The animals make a remarkable foursome because squabs are a tasty dish for dogs and cats as well as for men.

British Soldiers May Wear Helmets of Rags

LONDON.—Britons soon may be wearing "rag" helmets due to a shortage of regulation "tin hats" made of steel. The steel is needed for guns, tanks and ships.

Experts have produced a substitute "crash" hat made chiefly of rags for armament workers. It is half the weight of the regulation helmet and only slightly more pregnable. They will be placed on sale to civilians.

"You might get rid of your husband," Cox joked. "Why, that's a good idea," the woman exclaimed. "I'm going right out and get a lawyer and get a divorce."

Serves 10 Years, Flees Prison, Finds Culprit

CANTON, OHIO.—For 10 years Julius Krause, 28 years old, wore prison stripes, never protesting against his life sentence.

Then he escaped from Ohio penitentiary at Columbus and turned up here 44 days later with the man who, he asserted, rightfully should be serving his term.

Prosecutor A. C. L. Barthelme said that Curtiss Kumerle, 28, confessed that he, and not Krause, participated in a 1930 $80 holdup slaying of C. A. Bartlett, Canton grocer. Barthelme said he would request a pardon if Krause's story is substantiated.

ARMY OFFICERS SATISFIED NEW GARAND RIFLE IS ACCURATE

WASHINGTON.—The semiautomatic Garand rifle, comparatively new to the army although designed 11 years ago, is being manufactured on a mass production basis to equip an army of 2,000,000 men.

War department officials refused to disclose the present rate of production on the ground that it is a military secret and that "some people are very interested to know how fast the Garand is being produced and when we will have enough to equip such an army." The Garand—a gas-operated, clipped, self-loading shoulder weapon—has been the subject of controversy for some time, with die-hard vigorously opposing its use.

Despite their objections, army ordinance put the rifle through a series of the hardest tests imaginable. It received a diploma from the school of the doughboy, showing it "truly is fit for the wars."

During these tests, the infantry board at Fort Benning, Ga., fire 40,000 rounds of ammunition from Garand rifles, making every effort to duplicate the worst conditions likely to be encountered in an active campaign.

Prolonged firing with the Garand does not result in the bruised shoulder, cheek and nose familiar to those who have used other high-power rifles, the test revealed. In all comparable tests between the semi-automatic Garand and the bolt-action Springfield shoulder rifle, conducted by the ordnance department, the new rifle demonstrated "marked superiority."

CONSERVATION DEPT NOTES

A 1000 lb. bull moose was recently washed ashore on the beach at Lake Superior near Munising. 30 miles of ski trails are being developed in the Hanson military reservation near Grayling with the approval of army authorities.

600 archers are already in the woods to hunt deer with bow and arrow. Archers shot only 4 deer last year.

$100 fines are now imposed for illegal timber cutting on state owned lands.

612 deer were recently counted in a single evening recently near Mio by the deer investigation dept. The concentration in some places is said to be as high as 35 to 2 acres.

Increasing the use of combines in harvesting grain has the department of conservation's enthusiastic approval. The waste grain from this method provides much food for the game birds.

Old time hunters say fat squirrels prove the coming winter will be severe. The average weight of a number taken this year was 2 lbs. 10 ounces. The average weight over a number of years has been only 2 pounds.

Muskrat and minks may now be trapped in the upper peninsula and skunks and badger anywhere in the state.

Alex Aho of near Ironwood recently killed three bears who invaded his barnyard.

Muskrats furnish the bulk of the fur crop, 819,447 pelts being taken last year.

Bright moonlight frosty nights make excellent coon hunting. 35,000 of these animals were taken in Michigan last year.

Crucified his faithless wife on the wings of a windmill. Few tricked husbands have thought up this Greek farmer's revenge on a two-timing wife. Read the tale that shocked a whole community recently in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week Sunday Chicago Herald-American.

Philathea Notes

A very practical lesson is ours for next Sunday. "The Golden Rule in Life Today" Luke 6:27-38. We quote a helpful thought from our quarterly from the "Worship Service": "We may be sure Jesus would not recommend a rule, he had not proved, nor would he ask us to prove it had he not been certain of the result. The words that I speak unto you, they are life."

This will be armistice Sunday, yet how very far from peace is the world's attitude today.

The November copy of our 'Michigan Conference News' is very fine. One item of the many cheering ones speaks of the "healthy spirit of evangelism" marking the ministry of one of our pastors, where "the preaching of the pastor, the mid-week church service and the Sunday evening programs of the young people are all definitely Bible-centered. The people of the community are responding to this emphasis by an increasing attendance etc." Philathea will recall our slogan, "All standing by the Bible, the Bible School and the Church."

This "Conference News" number notes among the Benevolence contributions received up to October 12 that of the Pinckney church, $65.14. We have only a short time now to complete our years' Benevolence quota.

What Is Done with the Money You Deposit

In addition to providing a safe place for you to keep your money, a bank performs one of its important functions by putting these funds into constructive use.

Here is what happens to a deposit:

First, a sufficient amount of cash is kept in the bank's vault to meet all reasonable withdrawal requirements.

Second, the bank is required by law to maintain legal reserves with the Federal Reserve bank or with other approved depository banks.

Finally, the amount of the deposit remaining is then available to borrowers and is converted into constructive use through loans for proper purposes and through sound investments.

ELECTION AFTER THOUGHTS

The election results were not a great surprise to anyone who has made a study of elections although no one expected the victory to be of such proportions. While the Re-publican or the Willkie organiza-tions through their control of the press claimed everything in sight there were other signs that they were mostly engaged in whistling their way past the graveyard. For instance it was impossible to get a Willkie bet without giving big odds. There was $1200 in Roosevelt money here offered at 7 to 5 but no takers. $700 was sent into a Detroit broker but was returned with the note that the best he could give was 9 to 5. A few $5 bets were up here and there.

To our mind the Willkie campaign was bungled from start to finish. Willkie by high pressure methods kidnapped the nomination and then campaigned on a platform embracing all the New Deals measures whil-the Republican party had bitterly opposed for the last 7 years, while at the same time his party contin-ued to oppose them in congress. Then he depended on such renegade Democrats as Al Smith, Gen Johnson etc. whose speeches were filled with their hate for Roosevelt. Then as a last resort Joan L. Lewis, sit-down strike leader, was induced to go over to Willkie and make speeches. This gained no labor votes but lost Wil-kie thousands of supporters.

Willkie on the whole lacked ap-peal for the average person and his radio talks were uninspiring, despite the efforts of the hired commenta-tors to build him into a superman. Dr. Gallup, and other poll conduct-ors also did their bit at so much per column by going into a trance in the last few days and seeing an overwhelming sweep towards Willkie it like all mirages seems to have been upside down. This would seem to put Gallup in the same class as the Literary Digest. One of the big joys we will get out of the election is seeing the biased press who sup-ported Willkie and the paid com-mentators such as Gen. Johnson, Mark Foote, Lawrence, Paul Mallion, Roake Carter etc eat crow. This also applies to the Hearst papers who used every method known to jour-nalism to put Willkie over.

10,265 PEOPLE—Prepared to Serve

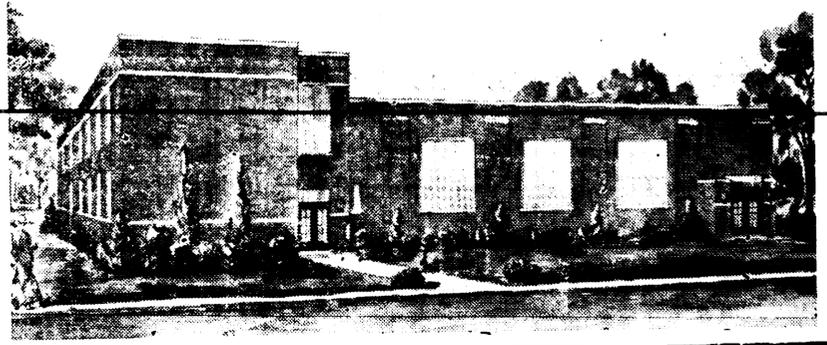

Telephone preparedness takes more than miles of cable, tons of wire, forests of poles and thousands of switchboards. Behind that equipment... building it, guiding it, guarding it... are people, 10,265 thoroughly trained, friendly human beings. They are the Michigan Bell Telephone Company! Their eagerness to serve you well, brings to life the wires and the switchboards. Their spirit is a basic part of this Company's preparedness... that is another reason why the Michigan Bell is ready to do its part in America's great program of national defense.

BOY SCOUTS

Is the Boy Scout organization worthwhile? Does it pay to provide a group of boys with worthwhile purposeful activities? Is it good judgement in times such as these to support an organization which instills a love of Democracy in the young boys?

Most of us will quickly answer yes to the above questions. However any organization to exist must have financial support and the Boy Scout Movement is no exception. Nov. 1-10 has been designated by Scout leaders as the time to campaign for funds to carry on the Scout work for the ensuing year. The money raised in this manner does not remain here; it goes into the district treasury where it is used to maintain the Scout organization of the Livingston Washtenaw Area. It is used to defray the expenses of two full time Scout Leaders, to maintain the scout camp at Dexter, to provide Merit badges and awards for scout advancement, to provide facilities for scout district meetings etc.

In the last few years Pinckney while having a Scout troop has paid nothing into the general treasury. It seems no more than fair that each Community contribute something to the support of this movement.

Mr. Hulce has been appointed as head of the finance Committee for contributing to the fund is requested. Pinckney and anyone desirous of contact him.

On Saturday November 9th, the Scouts will conduct a "tag day" as a means of raising funds for this project and it is hoped that each individual will contribute something to this worthy cause.

MISS BYINGTON'S ROOM

The Halloween party, in which the lower grades participated, was very successful. Phillis Loll and Pat Jeffries were voted best dressed girl and boy; and Renne Haines and Robert Aschenbrenner, the funniest dressed girl and boy. For refreshments popcorn, candy and apples were served. Two plays and a story were presented by the children of Miss Byington's room. They were "A Pet for Alice", by the third grade; "Mr. McDonald's Toy Shop", by the fifth grade, and a Halloween poem read by Ruth Gallup, fourth grade. Some of the mothers were present. All of the children had a splendid time. However, they found it rather hard to sing "Twinkle, twinkle, little star" with their mouths full of popcorn. Try it some time.

As yet, no reply has been received from the letters sent to the South asking for samples of Southern products.

For art class, the children colored soldiers, and these were put on the back black board. And outside of Tests and Talk, that is all for this week.

6TH AND 7TH GRADE

A number of grade children attended the Music meeting under the direction of Miss Elsie Thrasher. About 100 teachers and pupils were present.

Pat Jeffries of the 7th grade won the prize for the best dressed boy at the Halloween Party Thursday. We were glad to see so many mothers at our party and wish to extend to them a hearty invitation to come and spend the afternoon with us at our regular work.

The 7th grade so enjoyed the selection in their reading book from "The girl of the Limberlost" that the book was obtained from the library and Mrs. Lobdell is reading the book to us.

The School Board has been buying the Detroit Free Press for the 6th and 7th grades this year.

We wish to thank them for this as it helps in our studies.

SENIOR NOTES

The seniors had their weiner roast last Saturday night in spite of the cold weather more than none half of the class was present. After the class returned to the school, there some danced and others played ping-pong.

The government class had an election Tuesday morning that proved Willkie to be the future President of the U. S. as far as they were concerned. Willkie got 11, Roosevelt 8, and Thomas J. For governor Van Wagoner got 12 and Dickinson 8.

Many of the Seniors are now selling Christmas cards to earn more trip money. This money is for the individual's expenses on the trip. If those wishing to buy Christmas cards would buy them from members of the class it would be appreciated.

NOTES ON THE GAME

As you probably know New Hudson won the league championship by defeating Pinckney 27 to 6. The Pinckney boys can gather some satisfaction out of the fact that they were the only team in the league to score on New Hudson.

New Hudson had a very deceptive offense, however, we believe that they are not as strong as the Linden team that played here the preceding week.

Parbour almost got away for a touchdown in returning a kick-off. He brought the ball back approximately 50 yards before he was finally tackled by the last man on the New Hudson team.

Pinckney looks exceptionally well in tackling. For the third successive week a punt was returned for a touchdown. Last Friday it was on a 55 yard run. Several Pinckney boys had an opportunity to tackle the runner but none made any apparent effort to do so.

All of the season's defeats, however will be forgiven if Pinckney can only defeat Stockbridge this Friday. According to local history Stockbridge High has never defeated Pinckney in a football game, although the two schools played to a scoreless tie last year. The season's record shows that Stockbridge has 2 victories and 4 losses, while Pinckney has 1 victory and 1 tie and 4 losses. Pinckney's chances of victory will be determined by the amount of aggressiveness which the boys are able to generate this week.

Gerald Darrow, promising freshman Pinckney high school backfield man, who has scored 2 of Pinckney's 3 touchdowns has left school and gone to Three Rivers where he will attend school.

THE ETIQUETTE COLUMN

Last week our column dealt mainly with boys and so this week the girls are asked to sit up and take notice.

Most everyone has or will have a chance to introduce a friend and so here are some simple rules to follow:

1. In introducing two girls of nearly the same age, either may be introduced first. Example - Mary Litteracks is fifteen years old and Jane Crabapple is thirteen. In introducing these two you would say "Jane Crabapple, this is Mary Litteracks." This simple introduction is sufficient.

2. In introducing a girl to a boy of nearly the same age the girl is always introduced first. "Mary Litteracks, this is Bob Superior." Remember: always say the girl's name first.

3. When introducing an older person to a younger one regardless of sex, always introduce the older person first. "Mr. Bockstanz, this is Bob Superior". In respect to your elders always say the older persons name first.

When you have been introduced to meetcha". It sounds much better to some one don't ever say "Pleased to simply say "How do you do". If you want to shake hands with a man (when you are introduced to him) you can but it is your place to offer your hand to him first.

If you want two people to like each other from the instant you introduce them drop a hint that will start them talking. Maybe both Mary and Jane play basketball. Start talking about it and you will be surprised to see how easily they will fall into conversation.

Transforming a Box Into Smart Ottoman

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
 PAD the top of a box and slip cover it; then add a separate cushion three inches thick. The result will be a smart ottoman that either may match or contrast with the cover of your favorite chair. The little feet made of drawer pulls keep the ottoman from looking like a box. A corded seam where the skirt of the slip cover joins the top, and an inverted pleat at each corner of the skirt also give a professional touch. I suggest tacking the slip cover firmly in place as shown in the sketch.

If down or feathers are used to fill the separate cushion, make an inner cushion of ticking with a top and a bottom piece the size of the box top; and a straight three-inch piece around the sides. If kapok is used for filling, this inner cushion may be made of muslin. The cover of the separate cushion has corded seams to match the box slip cover.

NOTE: These directions should be clipped from the paper as they are not available in booklet form. However, complete directions for making slip covers and for making corded seams are in SEWING-Book No. 1. No. 3 also contains valuable slip cover suggestions. These 32-page booklets are 10c each. Excitement in Washington Calms As Election Ends Party Hostility Successful Candidate Will Be 'Everyone's President'; Future Farmers Hold Annual Convention; Neutrality Is Hard to Grasp.

By BAUKHAGE
 (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
 It's sort of quiet along Main street again.

I mean along the street that runs from the marble steps of the Capitol, up past the front porch of the White House and on out by the stores where you trade and the house where you live or maybe where your lane turns off. It's all the same street with different names in different places.

It's quieter because the howdy-do over election is through with, the people have cast their votes and chosen their President and have taken up their daily tasks again.

Before election day finally arrived, cool-headed writers and public men were warning that quadrennial campaign animosities should be forgotten as soon as the vote was counted. That the lame ducks should muffle their squawks and limp off the scene as quickly as possible, and that sore heads should be nursed with patience and without post mortems.

As Alf Landon said in October, "Whoever is elected will be my President for the next four years," and I believe what he said ought to go for all of us.

Federal Employee Resents 'Loafer' Charge

The other day I was sitting in the office of a man who has served the government for 30 years. He has had at least three offers from private business with a lot more salary than he's getting. But he wouldn't take any of them. He has an important job and he likes it.

He has no politics. He was appointed in Woodrow Wilson's day. He has never voted because he's a citizen of the District of Columbia and like the rest of us residents here is classed with idiots and children, and has no vote. He heard a lot about the New Freedom before we got into the war in 1917; he watched with a slight smile as the country went "back to normalcy"; he traveled peacefully, if a little skeptically, along Calvin Coolidge's "permanent plateau of prosperity"; saw one or both chickens escape their pots in '29, and lived through the New Deal without being plowed under or made over. And after election day, 1940, he went back to his office exactly as he had done every other time, to do the work for which he gets his wage.

He is as trustworthy a hired man as ever wore a pair of Uncle Sam's overalls. Every President is his President, too. But he put it a little differently to me:

"The only kind of a political argument that makes me sore is one where some partisan gets up and hollers about 'those loafers' (Republicans or Democrats, according to kicker's politics) 'down in Washington.' They forget that the vast majority of us carry on through one administration after another, doing the work we have to do. The loafers come and go, it's true. I don't mind kicking about them myself. What I object to is this loose idea that the government is just one political party or the other. Most of us here belong to no party. For the rest of the people, one day in four years is enough to give vent to their partisan passions. The rest of the time, we ought to be just plain Americans and nothing else."

'Future Farmers' Are Bulwark of Democracy

While Uncle Sam is preparing to welcome the first draft of the citizen army which is to bulwark our democracy, another gathering of youngsters who are fighting every day for the democratic idea without perhaps realizing how important their work is, are having a big celebration.

I mean the Future Farmers of America who are holding their annual convention in St. Louis. I have known about these boys for a long time. I have been on radio programs with them and have met a lot of them who come down here to Washington to talk with their executive secretary, W. A. Ross. But I never realized until this week what a powerful influence for the preservation of the American system these fellows are.

I have two reasons for saying they are a bulwark of democracy.

First, their ideal is just the opposite of "let George do it," the way of people in a dictatorship. The Future Farmers learn "do it yourself."

That's one reason. The other is that they all seem to be imbued with the desire to own and develop the land. No room for fascism or communism in that outlook.

I met the young president, Ivan Kindschi, from an 80-acre farm in Prairie du Sac, Neb., up in the dairy country. He was in Washington on his way to the convention.

I asked Ivan: "What are you preparing to do?" "I'm going to own a farm," he said.

And that, I figured out, after a lot more questions is why most of the boys join the Future Farmers. It's simple enough—they are future farmers.

"How did you get interested in the organization?" I asked him.

"Because they do interesting things."

That's simple and sensible enough too, and those interesting things include learning to be better farmers and following a great principle of democracy that gets kind of rusty in the city and in the country too—helping to make the community better.

These boys build investments in farm land, live stock and farm machinery through money they earn on their projects.

Nothing anchors a man to democracy like property he's sweated for. And they learn not only how to judge cattle, soil conservation, but all the other practical things a farm boy has to learn such as how to handle a hog from farm to market so when the packer weighs he won't have to cut a chunk out of a ham where somebody encouraged the poor porker aboard a truck with a boot.

Trained in their chosen profession, trained in leadership in their community, co-operative effort, thrift; and with this first phrase of their creed in their minds, "I believe in the future of farming," these young Americans are a defense of America "terrible as an army with banners."

Hughes May Retire Before Next Election

The new President is probably going to have an important task to perform which hasn't been officially announced: The appointment of a new chief justice of the United States.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes will undoubtedly resign before another four years are over. He's in good health and spirits, and if you were to meet that familiar figure on one of his daily walks, you'd hardly believe that he will soon pass his eighty-third year. And even if you had never seen him or his picture, you'd be very likely to say:

"That man looks like what a chief justice ought to be."

Mr. Hughes ought to be, and is. No head of our highest tribunal ever fitted the solemn setting of the Supreme court better.

Here is the law in all its dignity come to life—the classic forehead, the keen and friendly eyes, the white beard of the patriarch. He not only looks the part but acts it.

No one will begrudge Chief Justice Hughes a rest when he chooses to step down from the bench and up again to a high place in history.

It will not be easy to find a worthy successor.

Strict Neutrality Hard to Grasp

Neutrality is a hard state of mind to grasp. I mean neutrality of mind on everyday subjects as well as toward nations in a war.

Old Dr. "A. B. C." Fletcher, well known to an earlier generation as the great advocate of chewing your food, learned about neutrality while serving as a member of Hoover's commission that fed Belgium in World War I. In that job you had to be neutral or destroy your own usefulness.

Once he told me that you had to learn to be neutral—that it is an art. You just have to roll up your emotions and put them in a corner and look at everything objectively. Finally you get so that if a chicken runs across the road, it's still just a chicken whether you own it or whether you're the man who mixes it up with his fenders.

I've learned a little about neutrality myself in trying to be non-partisan on the radio in election years. It really isn't so hard to practice when you get used to it, but the difficulty lies in persuading other people that you are really nonpartisan.

Prohibition is back in the air again.

The Drys have begun a drive, tied up with the defense program, declaring that "America cannot prepare with the present gigantic drink traffic hanging on its arm."

The Prohibitionists say: "There isn't any group of communists in America that doesn't soak its resolutions with beer." And, we might add without taking sides, the Bible says, "Look not upon the wine when it is red."

It Must Be Admitted That Clerk Had No Snap of Job

The theatrical agent's new clerk entered the private room and said, "There's a lady waiting to see you, sir."

"Is she good-looking?"

"Yes, sir."

"Show her in."

Ten minutes later the clerk was summoned.

"Well," said the agent, gruffly, "you're a nice judge of beauty, I must say."

"Ah, but I had to be careful, sir. I've got to look after my job. For all I knew, she might have been your wife."

"Yes," said the agent, acidly, "she was."

31 Presidents
 Although Roosevelt is officially listed as the thirty-second President of the United States, only 31 men have actually held the office. The discrepancy is explained by the fact that Grover Cleveland is down in American history as the twenty-second and twenty-fourth President—the only President who served two non-successive terms, Benjamin Harrison's term intervening.—Pathfinder.

MICHIGAN STATE MIRROR NEWS

the ballot box, there is little besides his own conscience to deter the petition promoter.

The fault, it appears, rest principally with the constitution itself. In the articles dealing with initiatory petitions for legislation or constitutional amendments it is provided that each section of a petition shall bear the affidavit of the persons soliciting the signatures, affirming that the signatures are genuine.

"Such petitions so verified," the constitutional provision reads, "shall be prima facie evidence that the signatures thereon are genuine and that the persons signing the same are qualified electors."

Is it any wonder that the supreme court ruled the state department could not go back of the face of such petitions?

To the layman, at least, it seems as though something should be done about the situation. Taught to regard an affidavit as something that cannot be toyed with by practical jokers or high pressure lobbyists, he is inclined to wonder why "somebody" doesn't do something to correct the legal setup, if that is what is responsible for the loose practices.

Public Indifference
 Of course, public indifference to the responsibility of petition signing is partially to blame. It is commonly admitted that persons put their names on petitions they know nothing about other than what the circulator may tell them. The recent barrage of protests made public by persons who said they signed Communist party petitions under the belief the documents were for an entirely different purpose, illustrates the point.

What are the chief evils of promiscuous petition signing? They might be classified as:

1. Issues are put on the ballot that perhaps have no right to be there other than because an aggressive, small group wants it.
2. Cluttering up of the ballot by too many complex proposals serves to confuse voters and to distract their attention from really worthwhile measures.
3. Representative government is not given a chance to function freely.

Possible Remedies.
 A remedy for the petition problem then, appears to have two sides. One is a more active and enlightened public consciousness and the other is a more effective legal setup to regulate petitions.

It has been suggested by some observers that certain of the same safeguards which have been thrown about the ballot box should be used to safeguard petition signing. In other words, persons wishing to affix their names to a petition should, perhaps, be required to go to some public officer in their vicinity who would have a petition form available and who would be able to certify that they were qualified electors.

Is this too harsh a measure? Those who favor such a rigid plan contend that it would eliminate the various falsifications so prevalent now; that it would cause persons to think seriously about an issue before deciding to go to a polling place and sign a petition; and that it would tend to reduce the number of non-essential proposals appearing on the ballot.

Ballot Restriction
 Proponents of such a scheme point back to the days when there were no voting booths, no official ballots, and little if any secrecy at the polls. Ballot box stuffing, false counting, counterfeiting of ballots, "repeater" voters, and impersonators were all too common features of election day. These practices have been either eliminated or greatly modified as a result of a tightening of election restrictions.

One of the chief reasons for this improvement has been the Australian ballot. When electors began to use this ballot they were obliged to look the entire list of candidates in the face, so to speak. They were less inclined to be led to the polls like sheep with a ballot printed by their party and kept under surveillance while they dropped it into the box. One political commentator has said the Australian ballot served the high purpose of "putting some intelligence into the 'brute vote'."

It is on similar grounds that the critics condemn Michigan's present petition setup and urge steps to improve it. They regard most of the petitions on file with the department of state as expressing nothing more than a "brute vote", and they feel it is quite as possible and perhaps every bit as essential that "some intelligence" be put into it, also.
