How to Grow 100 Bushels of Corn Per Acre

This farm soil has what it takes to grow bumper corn yields.

WHAT does it take to grow a 100-bushel per acre corn crop? Four main essentials are necessary, says the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee:

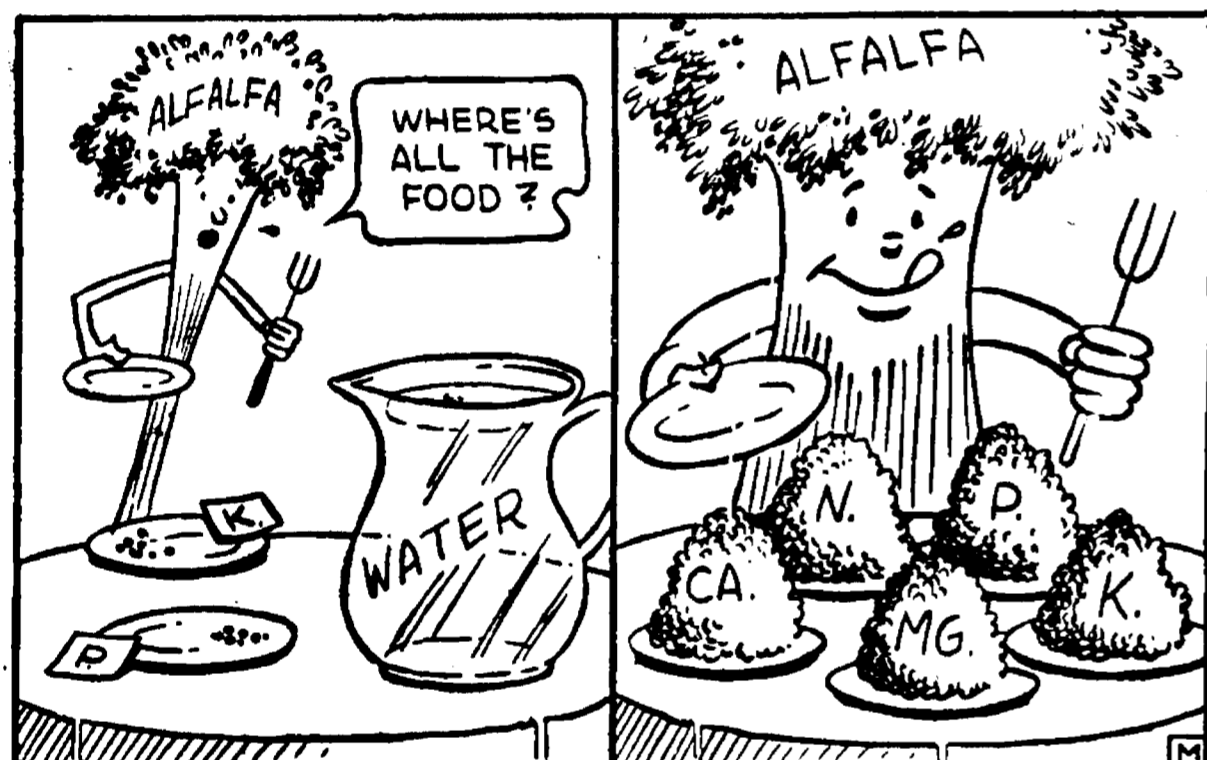

1. Good seed. Plant well adapted hybrids that are particularly suited to your growing conditions.
2. Be sure you have enough stalks per acre. That means from 14,000 to 16,000 q. most loam soils.
3. Provide the soil with sufficient amounts of well-balanced plant food so it will be able to feed the crop all season long—from germination to maturity.
4. Keep the soil in shape to take in plenty of water and hold it for the corn crop's use. An inch or two of rain can make the difference between average and high yields when dry spells come.

Agronomists recommend giving the corn a kick with a starter fertilizer at planting time. They advise adding nitrogen, phosphate and potash in the row and side dressing with nitrogen, fertilizer, where needed after the second or third cultivation. The sustaining fertility that will provide the backlog of nutrients the corn plants need for building strong stalks and well-developed ears, can come from fertilizer plowed under before planting time. A soil test will indicate what nutrients are most needed and the amount required to furnish a well-balanced supply.

Keeping the soil in shape to absorb and hold water depends on maintaining high reserves of organic matter. This you can do by following a rotation that puts in a well-fertilized legume-grass crop a year or two before corn planting. Land plowed out of a good sod crop is mellow, fluffy, well drained and able to supply the moisture a corn crop needs for extra bushels per acre.

Summer Seeded Legumes Need Full Feed of Plant Nutrients to Build Strong Growth

SUMMER-SEEDED legumes and grasses often make better stands than earlier seedings with nurse or companion crops, reports the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee. Many Midwestern farmers say that competition from the nurse crop weakens the seedlings, making them vulnerable to midsummer drought.

Alfalfa, clovers and all types of legume-grass mixtures are well suited to summer seeding. One of the big advantages is that weed competition is eliminated during the hot summer months when the soil is comparatively dry. Weed seed requires more moisture for germination than does legume and grass seed.

Agronomists recommend late July through mid-August as a good time to seed the legumes. A firm seed bed helps guard against planting the seed too deep.

Getting the seed in the ground isn't the whole story, though. You have to feed the soil so it can feed the crop. At planting time, summer-seeded legume grass mixtures need a complete fertilizer carrying nitrogen, phosphate and potash, plus calcium and magnesium. Then the plants will develop a strong crop-feeding root system and you will get thicker, leafier top growth. The legumes need lots of phosphate and potash. You can provide this after they are established by top-dressing with commercial fertilizer carrying these nutrients.

Pastures Need Soil Care

A SURVEY of soils scientists at Midwestern agricultural colleges reveals that they believe pasture improvement depends more on fertility than any other factor

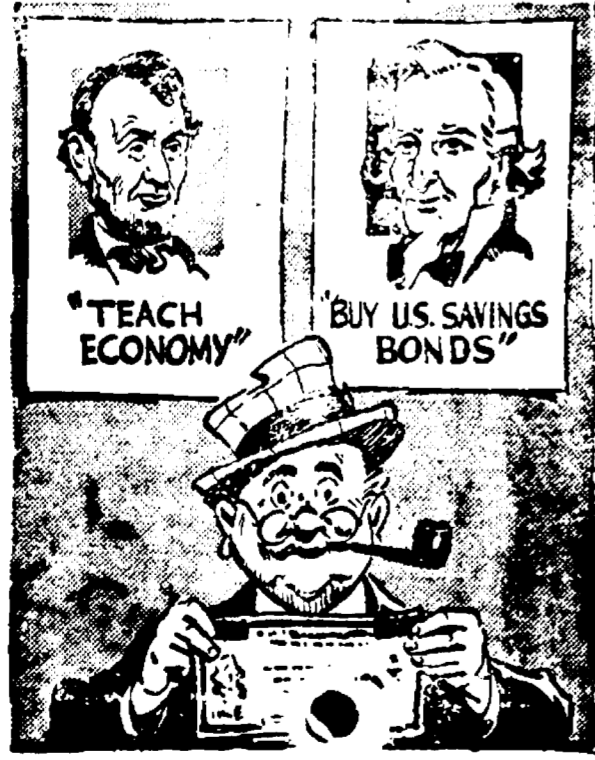

Dr. D. R. Dodd, Ohio State extension agronomist, says that these soils men believe that "much more general, frequent, and liberal fertilizer applications should be used on sod lands east of the range area of the Corn Belt."

In February we observe the birthday of our 16th President, Abraham Lincoln. One of the many virtues he possessed was the habit of thrift. In fact, he advocated this great American habit in these words: "Teach economy. That is one of the first and highest virtues. It begins with saving money." Your government has provided one of the best methods ever devised for saving. It is simple in operation—enroll NOW for the purchase of Savings Bonds where you work, or if self-employed, the Bond-A-Month Plan at your bank.

Farm Economists Call Fertilizer 'Cheapest Crop Production Item'

FERTILIZERS are still the "cheapest crop producer per dollar invested" among various production items the farmer buys, according to a recent statement by Michigan farm economists.

These specialists point out that efficient, high crop production per acre is the key to maintaining farm profits and keeping costs low. Fertilizer use is an essential factor in such a program.

A recent statement in Michigan Farm Economics, published by Michigan State College's department of agricultural economics, lists these steps for building efficient production per acre: (1) A good crop rotation that improves soil tilth and increases the organic matter supply; (2) Keeping output costs low by buying production items that are relatively cheap. Fertilizer is still the cheapest crop producer per dollar invested; (3) Putting the emphasis on cash crops that use more machinery and less hand labor.

Topdressing Alfalfa After First Cutting Holds Thicker Stands

YOU can add extra life to alfalfa stands and keep thick pasture growth in late summer and fall by top-dressing after the first cutting with phosphate and potash fertilizer, reports the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

The alfalfa plants will push out new growth faster. Roots will have a better chance to store up reserves of high energy starches and sugars. The soil will benefit from large amounts of active organic matter that help build tilth and structure.

Agronomists report that well fertilized legumes can make fuller use of soil moisture and of the carbon, oxygen and other nutrients taken from the air. Their taproots can probe deeper into the earth, carrying phosphate and potash from the surface on down to the moist soil zone below.

When well-fed legumes are turned under, they rot quickly to form humus, because they are packed with nutrients which feed the soil organisms which break down organic matter. The humus improves soil structure and releases plant nutrients to feed crops that follow in the rotation.

Agronomists emphasize that second crop alfalfa should be given a chance to establish a strong new top growth before it is pastured or cut for hay. These specialists recommend that fields should not be pastured after early September. This will enable the alfalfa plants to pack their roots with plant food reserves to carry them safely over the winter and spur healthy, early growth the following spring.

During the years America was growing up, the old, cracked, flat-topped tin canister, or even the horse-hair matress, was the only way to save and herden's things to build those savings sometimes came to naught. There's one or other hazards wiped out by savings in a jiffy. Today we have the finest and surest way ever invented to build security for the future—the U. S. Savings Bondway. This means you can put aside every pay day, part of what you get by signing up for the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or, if self-employed, the Bond-a-Month Plan where you bank. Either way, you get $1 for every $3 invested in 30 years.

Tight Phosphate Supply Means Need For Early Orders

FARMERS are again facing a tight fertilizer supply situation for the coming year, reports the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"The record-breaking demand for foods and fibers to meet defense, civilian, and foreign-aid requirements," says a statement issued by the committee, "means that more fertilizer will be needed to produce higher crop yields per acre.

"But shortages of vital raw materials used in fertilizer are already evident. This is particularly true of superphosphate, because of the serious shortage of sulfur. It is estimated that this year's demand for sulfur for defense purposes, industrial and agricultural use will exceed the supply by at least 10 million tons."

The committee lists these suggestions by Michigan State College soils men for helping farmers meet this situation:

- (1) Have a soil test made now to find out what plant nutrients it needs.
- (2) Order your fertilizer immediately.
- (3) Take delivery as soon as possible before the winter rush.

"If you act promptly," says the committee, "you can probably get the grades and amounts you want. But if you delay too long, it may be too late to get plant food supplies when you need them most."

The Michigan State scientists point out that by ordering now, farmers will help fertilizer manufacturers make room for more supplies, and keep their production at a high level.

MONEY DOESN'T GROW ON TREES— BUT TREES GROW INTO MONEY

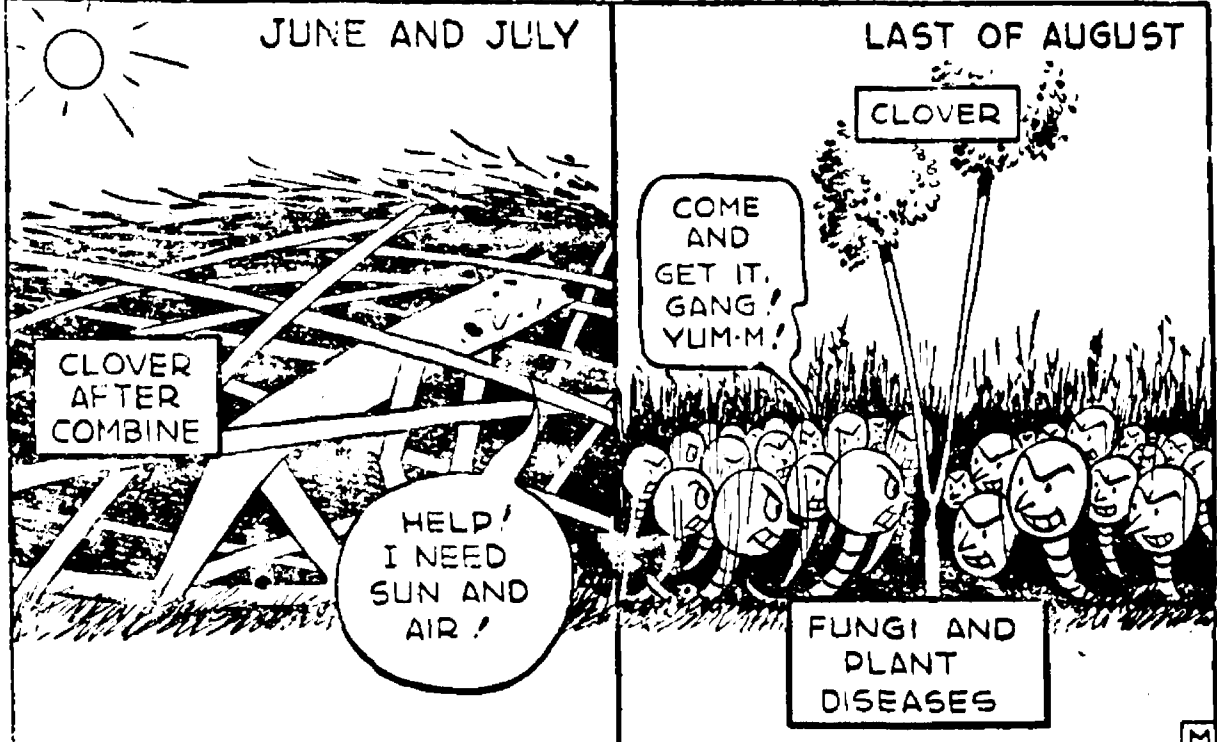

—NOT ONLY TREES, BUT CORN, CATTLE, APPLÉS, COTTON... AS YOU RIDE ACROSS THE COUNTRY YOU SEE WEALTH IN THE PROCESS OF CREATION ON EVERY HAND, AIDED AND ABSETTED BY THE LUMBERMAN, THE FARMER AND THE RANCHER.

IT'S THE WORK THAT THEY AND OTHER WORKERS DO THAT GIVES MONEY ITS REAL VALUE. WITHOUT IT, THERE WOULD BE NO LUMBER OR CORN OR BEEF OR OTHER THINGS TO BUY. WHAT THEY PRODUCE IS PART OF THE WEALTH OF AMERICA.

Removing Straw from Harvested Wheat Fields Boosts Hay Production from Legume Seedings

TAKE off all the straw from your wheat fields after the crop is harvested if you want to help new legume seedings live through the winter and boost hay yields next year, advise Ohio State University agronomists.

These specialists also recommend plowing or mowing legume growth for hay, as a means of preventing weeds and dead material next year.

When you combine wheat or other small grains, half or more of the straw is left in the field. Unless it is promptly clipped and hauled off, it will prevent alfalfa, red clover, Ladino and pasture grasses from getting sufficient sunshine and air.

Even more serious, the dampness under the straw will encourage the development of fungus and molds that will destroy the legume growth.

In some years, legume stands have been completely killed over the winter by failure to take off the straw and stubble, according to Ohio tests. In other fields, red clover yields have been almost doubled by removing the straw.

The agronomists recommend that new legume seedings should not be cut or pastured after September 10. The legumes need the fall months to store up the plant food in their roots needed for life during the winter and rapid growth the following spring.

The New... the New
JOHN DEERE 60

We're proud to announce the all-new John Deere "60" and "50" Tractors—successors to the famous Models "A" and "B." We have a "60" on display now. Come in and inspect it. The harder you are to please, the more impressed you're going to be and the sooner you'll want to get your hands on the wheel and put one of these tractors through its paces in the field. That's when you'll know they're truly great new tractors.

See it TODAY!

A SOUND INSTITUTION
 A sound body means a healthy body. A sound business means a good profitable business. A sound bank means a depository and lending institution where the interests of the depositor are paramount. A sound money issued by a government usually backed by gold, which in its representative form, paper of base metal is redeemable in gold and is commonly accepted in exchange for goods and services. Soundness, then denotes stability, a well balanced relationship between all parts, whether it be a human body, a business enterprise or a government.

All deposits up to $10,000 insured by our membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

BUYING SAFETY
 When you rent a Safety Deposit Box at this Bank, you are buying safety for the valuables and important papers you place in it. Here they are secure from fire, theft and accidental loss. He who hesitates may lose all he owns, so do not delay any longer. Come in today. Our rent is reasonable.
