Deadline for Fluoride Sign-up is April 2nd

Final requests and fees are now being accepted for the Summer Topical Fluoride program to be held in Pinckney. This program is being sponsored by the Parents Club in cooperation with the Michigan Department of Health.

The topical application of sodium fluoride to newly erupted teeth will reduce new tooth decay by 40% in groups of children. In addition to these benefits the program offers a valuable educational experience with no discomfort involved, and dental health education is given the child by the clinic personnel.

The entire procedure consists of four visits to the topical fluoride clinic which will be held in the Pinckney Elementary school. At the first visit the teeth are cleansed and the first application is given. An application of sodium fluoride consists of the teeth being isolated with cotton rolls; then the teeth are dried with compressed air and a 2% solution of sodium fluoride is applied to the teeth with cotton tip applicators. On the second, third, and fourth appointments the application of the sodium fluoride is repeated.

Any child who is a pre-schooler, second, fifth, or eighth grader is eligible to enroll in the program. Special cases referred by the family dentist or children who have previously missed out on the program. The fee for the cleansing and four applications is $3.00.

Record 36 Boys Turn Out for Local Track Team

Pinckney's track team has again taken to the streets and roads about town working out in an attempt to condition itself for the coming season. The largest group of boys, 36 in all, reported to the call on March 5 to ready for the ten meets, all of which will be run away from 'home'.

Last year the squad tied for first place in the Saline Conference, and lost only one dual meet. Despite having no regular track on which to practice, the team is hoping to better last years record. The following schedule has been drawn to date:

Choralaires to Perform at Hiawatha Beach

The Choralaires, a sixteen voice group from the Grand Rapids School of the Bible and Music, Grand Rapids, will present a sacred musical at the Hiawatha Beach Church, Hamburg, Mich. on April 1, at 10:00 a.m.

The group will offer a well-rounded program of sacred classics, Negro spirituals, and gospel songs and hymns of the church. Included within the group are several small groups such as trios and quartets.

The 2,000-mile itinerary, which includes nineteen appearances, is the fifteenth annual tour of the Choralaires. Offer First Aid Course for Home TV Viewers

All residents within the WILX-TV, Channel 10 viewing area will have an opportunity to receive Red Cross first aid training in their own homes.

On Monday, April 9, at 9 a.m. the first of a complete series of programs based on the Red Cross Standard First Aid Course will begin as a public service of the station. Viewers wishing to participate fully in this special course may register by sending their name and one dollar to WILX-TV, Jackson, Michigan, to cover the cost of textbook, study guide, postage and a special certificate presented upon passing the course.

Corporal William Carter, of the Michigan State Police, will provide the instruction on the program. He will be assisted by volunteers from surrounding Red Cross chapters during the various lessons and demonstrations. On completion of the course, registered participants will take a written test along with a review of practical skills at their nearest Red Cross chapter. Certificates will be presented on the basis of these test scores and the skills demonstrated. As part of its service rendered to the public for over 50 years, the Red Cross is using this unique method of instruction to reach the greatest possible number of persons with this vital training. Equally important, these people will learn the safe attitudes and habits that prevent accidents, for prevention is a fundamental purpose of Red Cross first aid instruction.

Last year over one million persons received certificates for completing one or more first aid courses. Included in this total are all members of the Peace Corps, who are required to complete the course as part of their training.

Vehicle Safety Check Program Coming Soon

The State Police are co-operating again this spring in promoting in Michigan the national vehicle safety check program which has for its goal the periodic checking of cars and trucks, particularly in time for increased summer and vacation driving.

Department safety and traffic officers in their respective districts are contacting local community officials to encourage voluntary participation in the program. Similar promotional work is done by sheriffs and other police departments and service clubs.

State Police officers will be assigned wherever possible to assist in the safety clinics, normally held in May and June. There were 210 programs in the state last year, an increase from 135 in 1960.

In 3,500 programs conducted nationally in 1961 involving three and a half million vehicles voluntarily checked, one in six was found deficient in one or more of the items.

Mrs. R. W. Lake, 74, a former Pinckney resident died in Howell this week. Her husband died five weeks ago.

In the election of April 6, 1914, voters in Livingston County will be asked to vote on a proposition to raise money for building an addition on to the County Infirmary. Putnam townships' share, according to its assessed valuation will be $146.12. Howell township with a valuation of $2,146,790.00 would have to pay $440.09, the largest amount in the county. The new addition, badly needed, will consist of a kitchen, pantry, four bedrooms and a basement dining room, would cost $3000.

L. E. Richards of Pinckney has in his possession one of the finest coin collections in the state. The oldest coins in the collection date back to 500 B.C. Another coin, a denarius, was the penny of Bible times. He has been offered large sums for the collection which he displays at coin exhibits but has refused all offers.

The Democrats met Saturday afternoon to name the following candidates for Putnam's spring election: Supervisor, James M. Harris; clerk, Clayton C. Placeway; treasurer, Irwin Kennedy. They will oppose a Republican slate led by Wales Leland for Supervisor; Roy W. Caverly, clerk, and Arthur Vedder, treasurer.

Paul Miller has sold his dray to Jesse Richardson who will begin his new duties on Monday.

Mrs. George Younglove, 80, a native of this area died in Detroit last week at the home of her son where she was taken when she became an invalid. The body was returned here for burial. Her son and aged husband survive.

Welcome Common Market

Internationally-Minded Business Men See Powerful Ally in Economic War

Of particular significance in today's economy is the influx of many forward-thinking American industrialists who no longer consider U. S. business as being confined to these shores. Among the new thought leaders is young, 41, Sherwood H. Egbert, who recently declared "Three-mile limit thinkers among business leaders are not serving the best interests of their country or stockholders."

Egbert urged Americans to welcome and cooperate with the expanding European Common Market as a powerful ally in the economic war with the Communist bloc and as a bulwark to NATO.

"Soviet trading is enemy action," declared the new, dynamic president of Studebaker-Packard corporation. "Since the declared Soviet objective is to demonstrate that they can beat the capitalist nations in the world's market places, we are all deeply involved in the economic phase of the cold war and we must never forget the stakes are the same as if we were in a shooting war. To the Communists, trade is always a means to a political end. They dump commodities to spoil markets where they can, without regard for profit. Not only do they seek to undermine markets by underselling, but they insert themselves into the economy of free nations with the object of obtaining leverage on the internal affairs of these nations."

STRESSES 4 POINTS

Highlights of his address:

1. A proposal to convert a mothballed freighter, with private funds, into an exposition ship called "Project Freedom," which would visit the world's ports displaying scores of exhibits demonstrating the methods and fruits of free government and free enterprise.

2. Recommended that businessmen cooperate with school administrators in increasing student understanding of the workings of the free enterprise system.

3. A proposal for re-evaluation of foreign aid programs and termination of aid to nations which "talk neutral and act pro-Soviet."

4. Proposed antitrust laws be updated to bring "monopoly power" in labor, as well as in business, under "proper control."

Recalling the accomplishments of Hospital Ship Hope, a people-to-people project, prompted Egbert's suggestion of recalling from the mothball fleet another ship to be christened "Project Freedom."

"I see 'Project Freedom' as a dramatic way to show the peoples of Asia, Africa and South America the meaning and fruits of freedom and free enterprise," Egbert continued. "Supported by private funds, this floating exposition would be a graphic picture of human progress under a free government. Its exhibits would illustrate the workings of free enterprise, free unions and collective bargaining, free worship and a free press."

S. H. Egbert

URGES TAX REFORM

The Studebaker-Packard president stated that no single question before Congress is more important than tax reform to economic health and growth of America. "It is vital that job-creating investments be encouraged," he added. The way to bring this encouragement about is to provide realistic depreciation allowances comparable with those enjoyed by competing industries in Western Europe. Then we'll see earnings plowed back for needed plant expansion and new equipment.

"Management, for its part, must step up to new, stiffer competition from abroad with every resource at its command. It must work all the harder to improve its products. On the one hand, it should learn from those imports that are successful with the American consumer. On the other hand, it must meet the demands of foreign consumers, whose tastes frequently don't coincide with our own—a truth only recently registered in the automotive market. Beyond this, we must build on our own promotions and sales skills—in which Americans have no superiors—and do an even better and more precise job of selling.

"You can take foreign competition lying down—or you can grow with the challenge," Egbert concluded.

PINCKNEY DISPATCH Wednesday, March 28, 1962

More than 800 were served at the annual St. Patrick's Day dinner at St. Mary's parish hall on March 18, according to a chairman of the event.

Fifty-seven from the Pinckney chapter No. 45 O.E.S. attended the Friendship Night meeting at the Howell Masonic temple last Tuesday. Last night a delegation consisting of Mrs. Edna Ward, Worthy Matron, Mrs. Eloyse Campbell, Mrs. Eva Engquist and James Moran attended a meeting of the Victoria chapter in Redford. Tomorrow evening eight members of the local chapter will be in attendance at the gathering of the Tyrian chapter in Detroit; Mrs. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Camburn, James Moran, Mrs. Mae Daller, Mrs. Francis Robinson and Mrs. Bernice Pardon.

You and Your Car

by Robert Wheeler

White glove inspections are not strictly a military custom—your professional automotive service man knows the term well. It is his way of discovering the tell-tale seepage of oil, grease, gasoline or water from the engine and other working parts of your car.

He may not use an actual glove, for a clean rag or piece of batting does as well. After cleaning the mechanism in question, he will run the engine, or make the wheels go around, or apply the brakes, as the case may be. Then he will pass the clean piece of material over suspect parts, and if the rag comes up oily, greasy or wet, he knows that vital automotive fluids are leaking, the forerunner of serious trouble.

Consider brakes, for example. Your trained mechanic should remove the wheels of your car twice a year, under normal driving conditions. If his "white glove inspection" reveals fluid seepage around the inside area of the wheels, it could indicate a brake cylinder leaking hydraulic brake fluid. This could result in sudden reduction of braking power—often disastrous at high speeds. The master brake cylinder should be checked for seepage, for if it fails, you may suffer complete loss of your brakes.

Testing for fluid seepage around the engine may show that engine lubricating oil is departing through a leaky gasket. If enough oil is lost, the friction of moving parts in a fast-running engine will generate unnatural heat, and as metal parts expand or warp, the engine can "seize up," leading to complete overhaul or replacement.

Loss of engine oil is especially a subject for preventive inspection, for many passenger cars do not carry an oil pressure or oil quantity gauge, as do sports and racing cars. Hence, undetected loss of oil at highway speeds can lead to the sudden, unpleasant surprise of a ruined engine and a layover "miles from nowhere."

Fortunately, there is actually an ounce of prevention available to prevent leaking fluids. The ounce comes in the form of a small tube of sealant, which the professional mechanic knows as Form-A-Gasket. In addition to sealing engine gaskets, he finds a hundred other applications for it, either for permanent cure or as an emergency stop-gap. Although Form-A-Gasket is a professional aid, like the medications in a doctor's office, many a wise motorist has made a point of learning its uses from the man who services the family car.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

The State Fair Grounds at Detroit lies within a 50-mile radius of 10 of Michigan's most populous counties and will soon be within an hour's drive of about 70 per cent of the state's population. But it is in use for a relatively short period during the year.

Gov. John B. Swainson, a number of businessmen in the Detroit area, and many citizens out-state would like to see this use expanded.

A 25-man Fairgrounds Development Commission appointed by the Governor recently submitted its report of recommendations on the possible uses of the facilities now available and construction of new structures which would encourage year-round use.

All recommendations were aimed at keeping the State Fair itself the primary function of the property at Detroit's north city limits, said commission chairman C. H. Mayne.

facilities also was recommended. "The need for improvements grows with each passing year," the Commission said. "Many of our buildings are in need of major repair; some of them are antiquated. As they age the cost of their maintenance increases."

A similar report to improve the present buildings was submitted to the Legislature, at its request, in 1955. This study called for a five-year program of capital improvement. Due to lack of funds, the recommendations have gone unfulfilled each year.

New buildings for agricultural, youth, and women's activities were among the recommendations for entirely new construction.

Rather than rely on the state Legislature finding extra money to devote each year to fair development projects, the Governor's commission recommended the improvements be financed totally through the sale of revenue bonds.

The commission cited several similar developments across the nation which were financed entirely through bond sales, "never at a cost to the taxpayer; without pledging the faith and credit of the state, and without mortgaging state property."

The Legislature would, however, have to create the Michigan State Fair Authority and give it bonding power if the commission's recommendations were to be put into effect.

Perhaps the two most surprising recommendations for new facilities were those for a dormitory and civic stadium. The commission emphasized none of the recommendations were designed to compete with existing facilities in Detroit, such as Cobo Hall or Tiger Stadium.

Throughout the year a ground level pavilion in the proposed dormitory building would house a cafeteria leased to a private firm. During the Fair, the upper floors would provide accommodations for junior exhibitors, herdsman and band participants. At other times, the dormitory area would be turned into a motel facility, leased to a private operation.

The civic stadium, designed to accommodate 80,000 persons at professional and collegiate sports events, represented a relatively new concept in the United States.

Commission members got the idea for the stadium from an 86,000-seat stadium built recently in Hanover, Germany, from rubble cleared from bombed out areas of the city.

Rather than dig deep into the ground to provide the base for the stadium at the fairgrounds, the commission proposed using earth fill from expressway excavations to build upwards.

Much of the dirt being dug out for expressway construction in the Detroit area is being trucked to Canada and dumped. Use of the fill for the stadium base would save some trucking costs and cut down the duplication of spending in digging out for the fairgrounds structure.

Legislative proposals by the commission got in just in time for the current session but little support was expected this year. The Legislature has been generally hesitant to create units with full bonding powers.

This is expected to be particularly true during the current year, while the Legislature waits to see what action the Constitutional Convention takes in the area of the state's borrowing limitation.

The late date at which bills encompassing the commission proposals were introduced also gave a little chance to promote their full effect. Next year, however, members of the commission can be expected to put forth a strong effort for approval of the recommendations.

Legislative debates over the most controversial subjects quite often bring forth the best of the humor shown in a given session. An excellent example of this came from Rep. Lloyd Anderson, Pontiac Republican, when the subject of tax solutions was being contested on the floor of the House recently.

Democrats were attacking the Republican legislators for failing to come forth with anything other than "nuisance taxes" to hike the state revenues.

"I don't care what you or we propose," said Anderson to a Democratic attacker. "If you ask the taxpayer what kind he wants, you'll find there isn't any tax he doesn't consider a 'nuisance tax.'"

The comment was taken lightly, but is probably more true than poetic.

Push-Button Mining

Mechanization advances in the coal mining industry are producing behemoths like this 16-story stripping machine which tears earth from the coal seam in 105-ton bites. It is so big it has a 3-story elevator inside the cab.

At another mine, the Peabody Coal Company this year installed the latest thing in push-button mining. The machine enters the strip alone and is operated by a 2-man team at the controls outside. Significantly, in 1961, the Peabody Company, second largest in the nation, recorded a $21 million profit on the sale of coal—the highest of any recent year!

While extensive mechanization has made the coal industry well, it has cost many a miner his job in the process. The result has been mounting pressure on coal state politicians and on the National Coal Association.

On the federal government's part, hundreds of thousands of dollars are being allocated to research new uses of coal. Hundreds of millions of dollars are being spent through distressed area legislation to provide relief for out-of-work miners.

The coal owners, their association, and their political spokesmen have found in residual oil imports a convenient smokescreen behind which the facts of mechanization can be hidden from the mine workers. Significantly, however, in the thirty-one months since residual oil import quotas were imposed, 38,300 workers have left the mines, yet coal production has increased 2½ million tons.

LIBRARY NEWS

We have a variety of new books this week which will be available to the public at our Open House, Friday, April 6. There are two new books of poetry: Ferris, "Favorite Poems Old and New" selected for boys and girls but favorite of all poetry lovers; Untermeyer: "Modern British Poetry." This is a delightful anthology of modern poetry from Hardy to John Mansfield and Alex Comfort. It also includes a biographical sketch of each poet.

Three new books should appeal especially to men and boys:

"Buck 'Lais'" championship baseball from little to big league. Tells how to play good winning baseball and is illustrated.

Zim, "Codes and Secret Writing" describes various codes and how to decipher them and how to write secretly with common household chemicals—even milk!

Hay "A Amateur Magician's Handbook" for those who like slight of hand and tricks.

We also have two novels which young people will enjoy.

Finney, "The Plums Hang High," describes the crude life on a farm in the mid-west around 1868, as lived by a young couple, English immigrants with no experience as a farmer.

Howard, "A Star to Follow" is the story of Ellen and Nellie Stacey who leave Detroit in 1875 for Arizona a remote and primitive place. Miss Howard is the author of "The North Wind Blows Free" which many have enjoyed.

We wish to thank Mrs. Lemm of Mowers Road for books.

Letter to the Editor

The Pinckney Dispatch:

Since I haven't been able to get it any other way I wonder if I might seek an answer through a "Letter to the Editor" medium as to the specific stand of the two school board members who oppose the school bond issue. There has been much talk about the opposition's stand being suppressed, but try as I might, I haven't been able to get a statement of what their stand is. If it is a legitimate stand there is no reason why it should be withheld until the day before the election. An intelligent voting public wants to know the issues involved with time to give intelligent consideration to both sides. No last minute surprise gimmick is going to defeat this bond issue; if the bond issue is defeated it will be because of a lack of specific information. There are still many questions to be answered.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Albert Sannes

"Something Old, Something New"

Two excellent blue-flowered garden flowers are blue lace flower, on the left and love-in-a-mist on the right. Unusual in form and color, they're easy to grow, excellent for use in arrangements.

"Something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue" — these are what a new bride is traditionally advised to wear at her wedding in order to insure the success of her marriage. Oddly enough, the same words might be said to a new gardener, to insure the success of his garden.

For "something old" is certainly needed in every season's garden even if it's only a temporary one. No one would want a garden which lacked all the old, familiar plants.

In well established gardens, the background evergreens, trees, and shrubs may be the old things. In new gardens, it may be sufficient to grow once again your favorite zinnias and marigolds of previous years or to grow the same kind of vine up the same trellis.

"Something new" may be as simple as growing a new variety of petunia, an unusual flower like linaria, or a 'different' vegetable like tampala. Or, it may be a bit more complicated, like an entirely new arrangement of a flower border to accommodate a more colorful group of annuals and perennials.

The "something borrowed" should most certainly not be the next door neighbor's lawn mower since such borrowing is sure to lead to trouble. It should instead, be the borrowing of ideas and the acceptance of advice from more experienced gardeners who live nearby.

They can tell you which tools you'll need, the location of the garden supply store where the clerks know their stock, the name of the greenhouse man who grows the newest varieties of annual plants. All of these will help you to have a successful garden.

HOWELL

It happened 100 YEARS ago

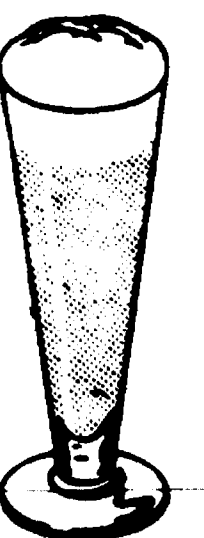

The oldest incorporated trade association in the country, the United States Brewers Association, was organized in 1862 . . . the same year that

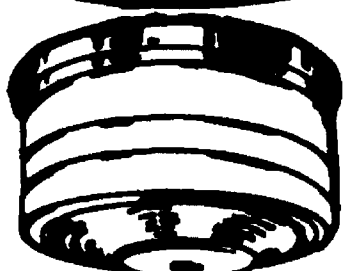

IN MICHIGAN, hearing of the gallant fighting of the 1st, 4th, 5th and 7th Michigan regiments against the Confederacy, folks all over the state toasted their troops' bravery with foaming steins of beer.

For then as now, beer was the traditional beverage of moderation. But beer means more than enjoyment to our state. The Brewing Industry pays more than 16 million dollars in taxes to Michigan each year, money that helps support our parks, hospitals and schools.

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and propriety wherever beer and ale are served.

Rich Study and Research Materials At WSU and Nearby Libraries

The above diagram illustrates accessibility of books to readers in the Detroit area in relation to the total world of books. The portion of the diagram within the shaded circle represents books in Southeastern Michigan, a total of about 3,000,000.

DETROIT—The 750,000 volumes in Wayne State University's libraries at the beginning of this University year, when added to the books in other libraries of the Detroit area, total something like a million and a half different books, a report from Librarian G. Flint Purdy shows.

The total collection gives faculty and students access to a rich and varied center of materials for study and research.

Special cooperating arrangements are maintained with the Detroit Public Library system, whose main library is only a few steps from Wayne's General Library. A mutual aid policy between these two great libraries is aimed at avoiding unnecessary duplication.

Wayne's own collection is especially rich in chemical literature, from many parts of the world, in various languages. A translating service is maintained by the Kresge Science Library in the special campus center in which this collection and other scientific literature is housed.

More than 40 national and local honor and professional societies initiate students or cite them at The University of Michigan.

The nation's first dial-selector and monitoring system for language learning has been installed in The University of Michigan's Language Laboratory.

Shelter Design Book Available

Those wishing to build their own home fallout shelters can now obtain the most up-to-date information through a handbook, "Family Shelter Designs," just distributed by the Department of Defense.

The booklet, prepared by the Defense Department's Office of Civil Defense, provides designs and detailed construction data for eight fallout shelters of different types. They range in cost from $75 to $650. All would cut to at least 1/100th the amount of outside fallout radiation reaching occupants.

These shelters, the booklet explains, are designed for "use by families who do not have access to community shelters or who prefer that their shelters be at their homes."

The handbook may be obtained from local Civil Defense offices or by writing to Office of Civil Defense, Department of Defense, Battle Creek, Mich.
