Future Homemakers Attend Meeting in Grand Rapids

Mary Aschenbrenner, Nancy Read, Pat Bayes, Valerie Parker, Kathy Gustafson, of Pinckney attended the 16th annual state meeting of the Michigan Association of Future Homemakers of America as the delegate of the Pinckney chapter.

They were among the 1,500 teen-agers who attended the three day meeting in Grand Rapids April 4, 5, and 6. Theme of the meeting was "Fashion Your Future with F.H.A."

Highlight of the three day meeting was the appearance of Dr. Evelyn M. Duvall, noted family and youth counselor, who spoke to the group on Thursday. Her speech was PRESSURES TO CONFORM — EVERYBODY'S NOT DOING IT. At this time the new State officers for 1962-63 were presented. State Homemaker Degrees of Achievement were presented to outstanding future homemakers who will major in home economics in college next fall.

Laurence J. Taylor, Vice-President for Hillsdale College, assisted the state staff of the Homemaking Service as general consultant to the annual meeting. Mr. Taylor spoke on LIFE'S STRANGE PATERN — IMPERFECTION. F.H.A. Chapters in Michigan

Convention Completes Work on Reapportionment Article

On April 5, the Convention completed the work on the highly controversial article (reapportionment). The article as adopted is a great improvement of what we presently have.

If the new constitution is adopted, there will immediately be granted to Oakland, Macomb, Genesee and Wayne Counties, each an additional senator. This is due to the extensive growth of population since the last decennial census. After the census of 1970, the Senate then will be reapportioned according to a formula which will be based on 80% population and 20% area. The House of Representatives will be selected on as near a population as possible and still adhere to county lines. This will place Michigan in the league of all other states in the nation as to the election of the House on a population basis. It will take 47% of the voters to elect 50% of the state representatives.

are sponsored by the home economics departments in the local schools and the home and family life education service of the State Department of Public Instruction. Mrs. Carolyn Fredrick, the home-making teacher, is the F.H.A. adviser of Pinckney chapter. Mrs. Rex Todd Withers, Chief of the Homemaking and Family Life Education Service, is State F.H.A. Adviser.

Principals To Meet at MSU

Elementary school principals from all parts of the state will meet at Michigan State University April 12-13 for their annual conference.

This year's meeting is built around the theme "No Place To Hide," which carries serious atonage connotations.

Speaking will be Gov. John B. Swainson; Major General Ronald D. McDonald of the Michigan National Guard; Dr. Herbert C. Rudman of the MSU College of Education, and Robert Gerholz, Flint businessman.

"Town Hall" meetings will consider such topics as problems of survival, pressures of the times and physical and mental fitness.

Other activities include talks by Dr. Stanley Idzerda, director of the MSU Honors College, and Dr. Elton B. McNeil, University of Michigan psychology professor, and various business meetings and clinics.

The conference, to be held at The Kellogg Center for Continuing Education, is sponsored by the Department of Elementary School Principals of the Michigan Education Association and the MSU College of Education.

Robin Heralds Michigan Week

Michigan's proud and cheery robin struts higher than ever this year as he heralds the coming of Michigan Week and proclaims to the world this year's slogan — "Michigan Marches Forward".

For the eighth successive year the robin, which is the official bird of Michigan, is the symbol of Michigan Week, which will be observed May 20-26.

The robin is the center attraction in this year's emblem as he has been ever since he was selected in the second Michigan Week back in 1955. He appears on all pieces of advertising and promotional materials used in connection with the celebration and on letterheads, envelopes, and in advertisements and articles appearing in publications of all types.

This year proud Mr. Robin wears a high drum major's hat on which there appears a symbol representing science and technology, which is the special emphasis subject for the 1962 Michigan Week. He holds high a bright colored banner showing the state's two peninsulas in red, surrounded by the Great Lakes in blue on a yellow background.

It is estimated that before Michigan Week is over the robin and slogan will be seen on millions of pieces of advertising materials and in practically every publication within the state as well as many national publications. He will also be on television.

The promotional materials, which are distributed at cost by the Greater Michigan Foundation, sponsor of Michigan Week, include a giant size poster, small posters, counter cards, shelf talkers, decals, lapel buttons, place mats and paper napkins.

The materials were prepared by a special committee headed by Kenneth Wright, vice president of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, of Detroit.

All Michigan Week chairmen have price lists and order blanks.

Survey Shows 850 Pupils In County Are Handicapped

Livingston County is not unlike any other county in these United States in regards the type of youngster who resides here. According to the United States Office of Education in Washington, D.C., for every one hundred children in school, 0.2 have visual handicaps, 1.0 are crippled, 1.5 are deaf or hard of hearing, 2.0 are emotionally disturbed, and another 2.0 are mentally handicapped. The State Department of Public Instruction estimates the incidence of speech defects among Michigan school children at 3.5 per cent.

What is the estimated number of children with various types of handicaps in Livingston County?

With the help of the public and parochial schools and the County Health Department, a survey was conducted in January of 1961 in an attempt to answer this question. The bulk of this work was done by the classroom teachers who were asked to report only those children who, in their opinion, could benefit by some type of special help which is not made available to them in the regular classroom.

With a county-wide school membership of over 9200 students at that time, the results showed over 850 pupils listed in this category.

These figures tend to indicate the number of handicapped children in Livingston County are quite representative of those found in other parts of the country. Most of the children in the above numbers are found in the classrooms throughout the county today.

Why do these children need special help? A classroom teacher makes every attempt to meet the individual needs of each pupil assigned to him. In most cases this represents a wide variance in the ability to learn. He attempts to challenge the gifted and brighter pupil, to stimulate the so-called average student, and at the same time, try to keep the slow learner interested and working up to his capacity. This is a tremendous task — and in most cases impossible.

In the elementary grades the teacher will have up to 35 pupils, junior and senior high teachers may have as many as 120 or more in their classes each day. While he will do his best to allow for individual differences, time and training does not allow this to take place. The course of study is usually geared to the mid-range group of intelligence.

What happens to the child who needs and does not receive this special help? Closer examination of the mentally handicapped child will show that he will gain something from his experiences and activities of the first few years of school, but when he reaches the point to where more and more of his education relies upon his ability to read, he begins to fall behind and the curriculum becomes more meaningless to him. His learning must be geared to the doing of things more in keeping with his mental capacity. If such a program is not available to him, he soon loses interest and often times turn to other things to gain attention. With a program adjusted to his capabilities he can learn many things and possibly get to know some measure of success, not only in school, but also in the community where he learns to meet the requirements of daily life and may eventually become a useful contented member of society. Without this help he often becomes a dependent person, relying on the community for his support.

Caucus System Out; Primary System In

At the Putnam Township Board Annual Meeting it was decided to abolish the old caucus system of nominations and to establish the Primary system for future township elections, according to township clerk, Murray J. Kennedy.

Auto owners in this part of the state are rejoicing because the new "auto tax" law has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court. This means they will be required to pay but $3.00 for a license plate instead of fifty cents per horsepower. The Secretary of State will now have to return about $190,000 to some 20,000 owners who bought their license earlier.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

Voters probably will elect a Congressman at large in November along with the other state-wide offices.

The Legislature's first attempt to reapportion the state's Congressional districts to create a 19th seat met a veto on the Governor's desk.

Republicans in the Legislature admitted the plan was a "statue quo" measure, which would have left most of the districts as they are now. The new district would have been created with the southwestern section of Macomb County and the southeast portion of Oakland County.

Gov. John B. Swainson and other Democrats want a general redistricting of the state. Michigan's 12th district, the western section of the Upper Peninsula, is the nation's smallest with 177,431 people, and the 16th district, in Detroit, is the largest in the nation with over 800,000 people.

The Legislature is expected to try again in the remaining three weeks of the session, but it appears doubtful the "old guard" of the GOP ranks will go along with an apportionment plan proposed by Sen. Carlton H. Morris, R-Kalamazoo.

The Morris plan was tentatively approved by Swainson and other Democrats before it was introduced but met strong Republican opposition because it included a general shift of all districts.

It would appear logical that both parties would be inclined toward settling the redistricting problem before November's election.

The problems of running a state-wide campaign are known only to politicians, perhaps, but the difficulties of being a good representative for some 8 million people should be obvious to all.

If no redistricting plan is approved in time for the fall election, the candidates for the Congressman-at-large seat most likely will fit one of two categories—either someone who has been in the succeeded, or someone who has been in the Michigan political spotlight and succeeded, or a relatively new and ambitious individual.

Three persons already are being mentioned as likely candidates for the office.

Secretary of State James M. Hare declines to say whether he is seriously thinking about the position, but democrats are anxious for him to seek the spot.

This perennially good vote-getter could very likely beat any opposition.

On the Republican side, both a relative newcomer and a veteran candidate have indicated some interest in the seat. They are State Rep. Gilbert E. Bursley, Ann Arbor, and Constitutional Convention delegate Alvin Bentley, of Owosso.

Bursley, who is concluding his first term in the State House, has had wide and varied experience in government positions although his present post is his first elected office. His activities as chairman of a legislative committee on economic growth have enhanced his position somewhat. The committee has held hearings in every corner of the state.

Bursley openly admits he is interested in running for Congress but apparently he does not want to face a primary fight with 2nd District Rep. George Meader, who also lives in Ann Arbor.

Bentley was unsuccessful in his bid for the U. S. Senate seat held by Democrat Patrick V. McNamara so might not be willing to attempt another state-wide campaign, but he makes no bones about the fact that he wants to stay in public life. He gave up a seat in Congress to make the Senate race in 1960.

The early months of 1962 gave the Michigan Economic Development Department every reason for optimism.

So far this year, the ratio of industries moving in as compared to shifts out of the state is running 6 to 5. Dr. Paul Herbert, chief of the department's research division termed this a "distinct improvement" over the same period last year.

Indications are that the trend noticed in the latter part of 1961 in southeastern Michigan is continuing, Herbert said. The trend showed the Detroit Metropolitan area and the southeastern counties were staging a comeback in industrial location.

The department is planning to emphasize individual community efforts in industrial growth during the entire year, Herbert said.

"Cities and villages that have been doing outstanding work in local industrial development are being singled out for meetings of the Michigan Industrial Ambassadors," he said.

The Ambassadors is a group of nearly 300 businessmen who travel throughout the country promoting the industrial advantage of Michigan communities.

Among the notable local efforts in the limelight recently have been the attempts by Port Huron, Jackson, Detroit and several other cities to get a new district processing center planned for the Midwest by the Federal Internal Revenue Service.

Port Huron is offering a 30-year site where a new building will be constructed and leased to the government for $1 a year. The Jackson Industrial Park officials have offered 15 acres and a building for lease.

Herbert said several other cities have also offered free sites

OLD CANDLES, ANYONE?

The junior class J-Hop decorations committee needs old candles, chunks of wax or paraffin to be used in the making of certain decorations for the coming dance. The committee will greatly appreciate receiving donations of these materials and those wishing to donate may send the items to Mrs. Don Swarthout's art class at the high school right after vacation.
