MICHIGAN MIRROR

Michigan voters enjoy a position unequalled in most states. They are able to hear the results of their polling in a matter of hours after the ballots are cast because of the extensive use of voting machines.

Secretary of State James M. Hare reports the use of automatic voting machines has increased steadily through the years.

This November, only about 635,000 registered voters will use paper ballots, while the other 3,075,000 voters will have machines at their precincts.

Of the 5,199 precincts in the state, 28.4 per cent or 1,477 units, are "paper precincts" while 3,722 are "machine precincts," Hare said.

"Despite the widespread use of machines, only four of Michigan's 83 counties are completely mechanized," Hare said. These are Bay, Kalamazoo, Muskegon and Ottawa counties.

"There are a number of counties, however, where less than 10 per cent of the electorate use paper ballots," said the Secretary of State.

The State Corrections Department operates basically six institutions which annually house upwards of 9,000 persons convicted of a crime.

Included under the department's jurisdiction are the Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson, the House of Correction and Branch Prison at Marquette, the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia, Cassidy Lake Technical School near Chelsea, a medium security institution at Ionia, and the Detroit House of Correction.

In addition several prison camps and a 100-man probationary recovery camp for youthful probationers near Traverse City are operated.

A 1953 Legislative Act charges the department with the responsibility for carrying out the state's adult prison, probation and parole systems at the order of a commission appointed by the Governor and under the administration of a director named by the commission.

Female inmates are confined at the Detroit House of Correction. A few male inmates also are placed in this institution to assist in general maintenance and operational requirements.

In addition to those incarcerated under state law, the department is responsible for supervising probation services. This involves better than 5,000 persons in an average year, department officials said.

In 1960, even before former Gov. G. Mennen Williams announced he would not seek a seventh unprecedented term, members of his top staff started leaving the executive office for private industry and self-employment.

After the announcement was made formally, the staff vacancies increased sharply.

The tenor of concern over the forthcoming November gubernatorial election may be seen in a similar occurrence in the present administration. State Controller

Ira Polley was the first to resign.

Polley, a native of Alaska, became head of the Department of Administration in 1956 when he was appointed by Williams.

He was reappointed when Gov. John B. Swainson took over in the executive office and was confirmed by the State Senate as required by law.

Polley, with a long background in educational circles, now is leaving State Government to take over the full-time job of executive director of the Michigan Council of State College Presidents.

The controller denied that his acceptance of the Council post had any connection with the political future of the incumbent Democratic governor. "This did not have the slightest effect on my decision," Polley said.

Polley described the new post as "a challenging assignment which promises to be less of a multi-purpose job than my present one."

The executive director's post for the Council was created a little more than a year ago when the members, presidents of the nine state-supported institutions of higher education, decided they needed to present more of a united front.

Polley's present post involves many varied responsibilities and is viewed as a position of power.

WYNNE CHESTER SAYS:

Proud Project

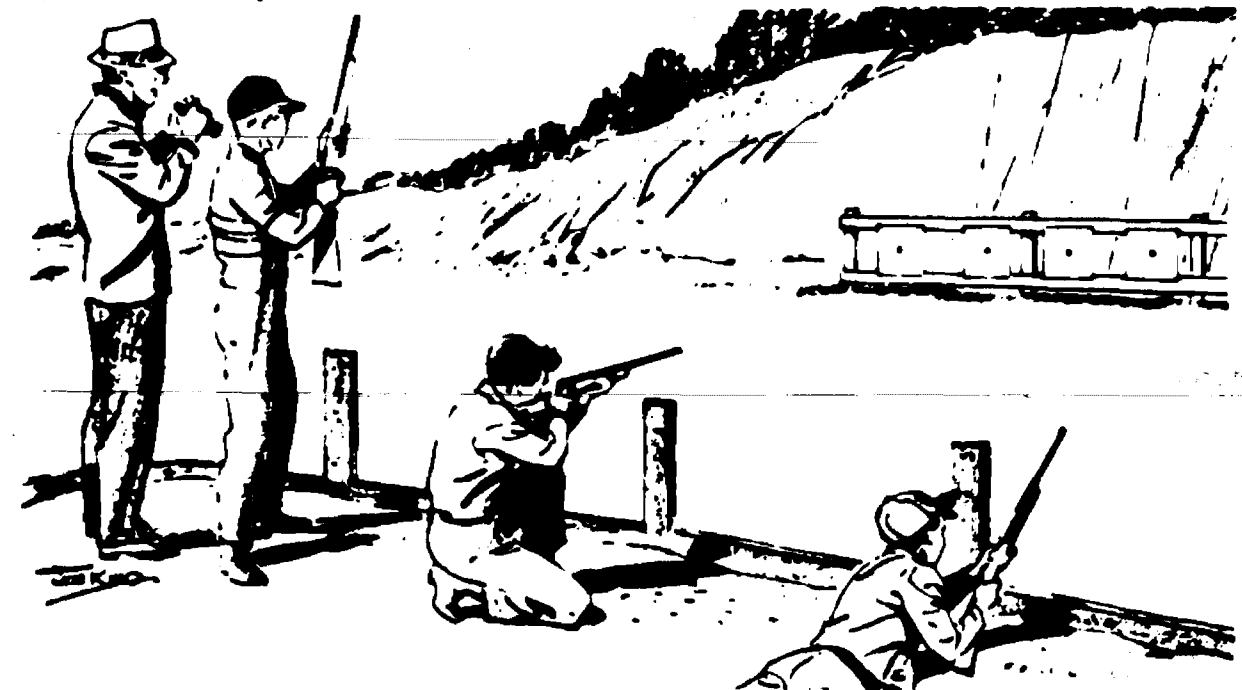

Joe and his friends completed a project recently that made them feel mighty good. As for me, I'm so proud of them I'm ready to bust!

They built an outdoor shooting range for the youngsters in our neighborhood. How? It's easy. Here's the way to do it.

Safety comes first, so find a vertical hill or bluff at least 30 feet high, or cut it to nearly vertical yourselves. Make sure it's free of rocks, which could cause ricochets. Pace off 50 feet to the firing line. As you can see, the target holder is a simple frame of two-by-fours, the shooters area a few inches deep in sand. Before you start, check the local laws on outdoor shooting and secure permission from property owners—and that's all there is to it. A wise neighborhood investment, believe me!

2. Approve the relocation of Hall Road to the rear lot lines of Haarer Subdivision.

3. Agree to any condemnation proceedings that the County Road Commission may wish to take.

4. Make no commitments at this time as to monetary consideration.

Motion carried.

Motion by Rettinger Supported by Bennett that meeting be adjourned.

In recognition of world peace as a cherished goal of people everywhere, requiring not only a high degree of moral rectitude and justice in social and administrative activities, but also complete freedom from prejudice in dealing with people of different ethnic group, class, creed and color, Gov. Swainson proclaims World Peace Day in Michigan as members of the Baha'i World Faith join in national observance of the event.

Program for Homemakers

Home extension groups will start their program for the year with a training session for officers on September 19 in the Methodist Church in Howell. Council members and our new county chairman, Mrs. Howard Nichols, will assist the county extension agent in a kick-off session for the coming events. We have several new council members to help carry on the work this year. Mrs. Gus McCreedy, Mrs. Godfrey Hards, Mrs. Steven Laszlo, Mrs. Everett Nichols and Mrs. Kendall Hoisington will start their duties as council members. Mrs. Bert Bair will serve as vice-chairman for the county.

Each year the Extension program is made up of a variety of educational experiences and activities for women who wish to participate. Both rural and urban women participate. Lessons vary from year to year. For those who study with us over a period of years there is an opportunity to learn many things. This year we plan to study the problems of families in a changing society, with emphasis on parent-teen-agers conflicts. This is one part of a series of lessons in family living which have been given in the past few years. Consumer protection, insurance for the family, care of modern fabrics, refinishing furniture and interior design will be included in this year's program.

As life becomes more complex so does the job of the homemaker become more complex. Today's homemaker must be a student of psychology, a nutritionist, she must understand family financing such as the use of credit, insurance for the family, family investments, legal phases. Homemakers can no longer afford to ignore the problems of government, society, public health or safety. She can no longer be a weaver of cloth and a preserver of foods, with no thought to the community around her.

The Extension program aims to help women to become better informed in areas in which their participation is greatly needed.

Many things can develop through this program. A better understanding of parliamentary procedure, experiences to develop leadership, an opportunity to give aid to others, participation in programs for the health and safety of all, these and many others are all woven into participation in the program, if the homemaker wishes to accept a challenge.

The Extension program has been called an open door to more abundant living. Many women have found this to be true. The door is open to any woman, but she herself must decide if she wishes to enter.

Soil Compaction Limits Yields, Cuts Crop Income

A FEW minutes spent in checking soil's tilth and structure with a soil probe or spade can pay off in better yields and income in years ahead, reports the National Plant Food Institute.

"If you have to push hard with your foot on a spade to dig up soil between rows, it's a good chance that corn plants don't have root room for top profits," says the Institute.

"By overtilting seedbeds, farmers can lose the benefit gained by a good fertilization program."

"If a soil is tight on top, it is also packed at plow depth. Actually, compaction from tractors and machinery is greater at plow depth than at surface."

Compacted soil prevents roots from pushing down for nutrients and moisture. There isn't sufficient oxygen exchange, because air is slow to move in tight soil. Drainage is poor, water ponds or runs off instead of soaking in. Needed moisture often can't reach thirsty plants.

Agronomists recommend these steps for correcting soil compaction, restoring structure and tilth and making soil loose, porous and mellow:

1—Put back organic matter. This means plowing down corn stalks, grain straw, and legume-grass crops.

2—Add enough nitrogen and phosphate to decompose crop residues, build up soil.

3—Use only enough tillage to make a seedbed in the row. Then air and moisture can penetrate root zone.

Add To Profits, Save More Time, Fertilize In Fall

FOUR profit-building ways to use fertilizer this fall are suggested by the National Plant Food Institute, based on Midwest college suggestions.

Top-dress legume grass meadows with fertilizer late this summer. Alfalfa and other rotation meadows need a good supply of phosphate and potash after the last cutting. This helps insure growth recover. It gives plant roots a chance to store up nutrient reserves to survive the winter.

Fertilize winter wheat at planting time this fall. The seeding will have a better chance to take cold weather in stride. Where soil and moisture conditions are such that some nitrogen may be lost, you can use a starter fertilizer with just enough nitrogen to speed early growth, then follow up in spring with a nitrogen top-dressing.

Add the fertilizer this fall that you ordinarily would plow or disc in for corn or small grains next spring. Agronomists say there is little chance of nitrogen loss where the sub-soil is dry and there is not enough rain to move nitrogen out of the root zone before spring.

Top-dress bluegrass and other permanent pasture with nitrogen-phosphate-potash fertilizer. Fall-fertilized pasture can yield more protein per pound of grass, more forage per acre.

Mrs. Tillie Berry of Alta Mae Beauty Shop is spending a two-week vacation in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Cobb who spent the summer in Lakeland are spending a few days this week at the Harold Henry home before leaving for Fort Myers Beach, Florida, for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stormont of Detroit were Sunday guests at the Floris Clarke home.

Post Office Will Not Pay on All Lost, Damaged Mail

"There is a general misunderstanding among the mailing public that indemnity will be paid by the Post Office Department on all lost or damaged mail," says Postmaster Lawrence Baughn. According to the postmaster, patrons are often disturbed when they present a damaged parcel to the post office and find that no indemnity will be paid unless the parcel is insured, registered, or collection-delivery (c.o.d.).

"Although every effort is made to protect all mail while it is in the custody of the postal service," the postmaster said, "unavoidable circumstances occasionally occur which result in mail being lost or damaged. The only way mailers may reduce the possibility of financial loss on valuable items is to avail themselves of those services which pay indemnity such as registered, insured, and collection-delivery."

The fact that indemnity is not paid on ordinary mail, however, does not mean that the post office has no interest in situations where ordinary mail is lost or damaged or otherwise improperly handled. Postmaster Baughn wants it to be known that reports by the public of loss, rifling, delay, or damage to ordinary mail are of the greatest value in finding and correcting faults in the postal service.

Complaints concerning the postal service may be made in writing to the postmaster or they may be made orally by calling at the post office. If the complaint concerns the mishandling of mail, the envelope or wrapper should be submitted.

Extra Dollars For Farmers Who Fertilize Winter Wheat

EXTRA income can flow into the pockets of Midwest farmers who fertilize their winter wheat this fall, reports the National Plant Food Institute, in citing studies by college agronomists in a number of states.

Illinois tests indicate winter wheat yields were boosted 14 bushels per acre when nitrogen fertilizer was added at fall planting time.

Ohio and Indiana agronomists report effective yield reshould be determined by soil tests," he notes. "But generally speaking, the use of plant food supplying 30 to 50 pounds of phosphate and 15 to 25 pounds of potash per acre is satisfactory."

Clinton Hoover, University of Nebraska extension agronomist, says wheat growers should "set the table for two" when they fertilize in the fall. This means applying enough plant nutrients to assure top wheat yields and to feed the billions of soil organisms that convert plowed-down straw into soil-building humus.

Where the fall straw plow-down runs two tons per acre, up to 50 pounds of nitrogen may be needed to turn straw into organic matter, feed soil organisms and supply needed nutrients for the winter wheat crop.

Phosphate fertilizer, says Hoover, should be applied on the basis of soil tests and in amounts recommended by agricultural college agronomists.

Well-fertilized wheat yields more bushels per acre and extra income when needed plant food is added at fall seeding time.

sults from fall applications of nitrogen, phosphate and potash fertilizers. Follow-up nitrogen top-dressings the next spring pay off in higher profit yields, they say.

John Falloon, University of Missouri extension soils specialist, says farmers can generally expect an increase of one bushel per acre for every three pounds of nitrogen they add, where the soil's phosphate and potash levels are satisfactory.

Dr. Floyd W. Smith, Kansas State University agronomist, says top profit wheat production requires a fertilizer containing from 30 to 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

Top-Dress Forage For Extra Hay, More Pasture

PLANT food put on forage crops in late summer or early fall, mean extra tons of high quality hay or pasture next year.

"Midwest college agronomists emphasize that alfalfa and other rotation meadows generally need a good fall top-dressing of phosphate and potash fertilizer to replace the used-up nutrients," says the National Plant Food Institute. "To obtain the fullest benefits, top-dress right after the last cutting of hay."

"Plant food will encourage greater fall growth of legumes. It will also enable the plant roots to store up nutrient reserves. This will help legumes withstand severe winter and start growth vigorously in spring."

Minnesota soils men say potash does a good job of cutting winter kill and maintaining legume stands. Phosphate is a good yield builder.
